NORTHWEST REGIONAL

Rattlesnake Gulch Roundup

September 23-26, 2010

Benton City, WA – Remember when you played cowboy with your friends and were always on the hunt for the bad guy? If so, you had your chance to relive this childhood fantasy this year at the Northwest Regional Championship. Our theme “Wanted Dead or Alive” re-enacted the escapades of Josh Randall, the bounty hunter, as he rounded up bad guys across the West.

Our side matches on Thursday included all the regular events along with a 4-stage Plainsman event, 2-stage Wild Bunch event, and a night shoot. Special thanks to Silent Sam, SASS #10991, Texas Jack Morales, SASS #5026, and Hipshot, SASS #7, for taking over the Wild Bunch event.

After shooting the side matches on Thursday, six stages per day were shot on Friday and Saturday. The scenarios varied from ambushes on the trail, to saloon fights, stage robberies, jail breaks, and town shootouts. When the smoke cleared, all the desperados lost.

Six stages were shot each day on Friday and Saturday. The scenarios varied from ambushes on the trail, to saloon fights, stage robberies, jail breaks, and town shootouts. Leggs Balou is seen here dealing Western justice to a whole passel of outlaws. When the smoke cleared, all the desperados lost!

Our evening entertainment on Thursday and Friday revolved around Iver Johnson's night shoot. Competitors were invited to participate in a side match where roles were reversed and you, the shooter, acted as the bad guy attacking the nice town folks of Rattlesnake Gulch by a video projected on the targets. We also had our annual Soiled Dove/Finest Derriere contest on Friday.

This year, our shooters were invited to have their picture taken with their favorite soiled dove and the proceeds from the sales of photos donated to the SASS Scholarship Fund. Goldvein Photography also produced a 2011 Soiled Dove Calendar with photos from past Regionals to raise additional funds for the scholarship. This endeavor was a huge success, and the calendars were sold out. Good job Diamond Deb and GD Rimrock Goldvein! The Rattlesnake Gulch Rangers really appreciate your efforts to raise money.

After the photo session, Hank Hills, SASS #78028, piped the doves from the town to the stage to compete for top soiled dove. The merry piper led 15 of his favorite ladies to the podium. Moose Call, SASS #30877, and Mudflat Mike, SASS #20904, interviewed the lovely ladies and after much deliberation by our panel of experts, Georgia Bank, SASS #86344, was selected winner. Special thanks to Hilde, RP Dodge, SASS #20279, and Dutch Van Dooler, SASS #48790, who acted as our judges and to all our participants who make this contest a success each year.

With the winner of the Soiled Doves determined, it was time for the finest derriere contest. This year the soiled doves acted as the judges. After close inspection, the winner was determined to be Runamuck, SASS #44216. Some of the

COWBOY ACTION IN EUROPE

By Tex, SASS #4 & John Peacemaker, SASS #51709

Cowboy Action has begun to grow rapidly in Europe. There are clubs in nearly every country. While not nearly all the cowboys belong to SASS, it is SASS that is providing the unifying set of rules, policies, and practices the local clubs are adopting and the country officials are accepting in order to approve the discipline being shot in their country. As the game grows and more and more clubs opt to hold annual matches, conflicts inevitably occur (nice problem to have!). And, the European Cowboy Action Championship, Days of Truth, moves around the continent each year, and needs to be coordinated. Harmony among the clubs requires communication, of course, but country pride can sometimes get in the way ... nobody wants someone else telling them what they can and cannot do!

The Wild Bunch realized years ago it cannot get directly involved in local politics ... it's sort of like the "Prime Directive" on Star Trek! Not only does the Wild Bunch not truly understand the nuances of a local issue, they certainly don't understand the gun-laws in each country or the politics of dealing with personalities across borders. Consequently, the Wild Bunch has an official representative in Europe to watch after SASS' interests, and to do what he can to facilitate communication between SASS Headquarters and the European clubs.

However, the story doesn't end there. The European cowboys have developed their own way of facilitating communication among themselves—The European Board of Representatives. This Board consists of two representatives from each country, and each country has one vote when addressing any issue. This Board meets during major matches and exchanges information regarding our sport. Coordinating the time and place of Days of Truth, for example, is one important topic that is periodically addressed.

European cowboys are encouraged to contact their Board representative regarding local issues or Kodiak AI for issues involving SASS. Members of the Board of Representatives are identified below:

ROCKCASTLE RANGERS CLUB IN KENTUCKY HOSTS INAUGURAL SASS SHOOT

By Lisa G. Cinquino,
Park Mammoth Resort Public Relations Director

Park City, KY – Park Mammoth Resort’s Rockcastle Shooting Center, hosted its first Single Action Shooting Society event November 28, 2010. A permanent Cowboy Action Shooting™ range was fabricated, complete with five Old Western facade stages spread out amongst the two thousand acres of the sprawling family resort. The titled match, “Welcome to the Rock,” attracted over thirty competitors from five states, all dedicated to preserving and promoting the history, spirit, and sport of Cowboy Action Shooting™ by dressing in authentic costumes. Single action revolvers, pistol caliber lever action rifles, and old time shotguns, either original from the 1800 period or replicas are shot by the competitors in a timed event.

T-Bone Dooley, from Texas, a six-time Classic Cowboy World Champion won the Outlaw Division and was the Overall Champion. Iron Maiden, the current Ladies Duelist World Champion won the Ladies division and Vaquero Jake, current Kentucky State Champion won the Buckaroo Division.

Nick Noble, CEO of Rockcastle Shooting Center, said, “At Rockcastle, we are committed to creating a destination resort for all shooting enthusiasts that participate in various types of shooting sport events. We’re proud to provide all SASS members with a permanent home where monthly SASS shoots will now occur every fourth weekend.”

Shaddai Vaquero, Territorial Governor for Rockcastle Rangers SASS Club, said, “For a first time SASS event at Rockcastle, we had a successful match that drew top quality shooters. The potential for Rockcastle Rangers SASS Club to offer our members in terms of growth is unlimited, and we are excited to begin building the next phase of the Old Western town.”

Rockcastle Shooting Center is the newest addition to the Park Mammoth Resort property, which is developing into the nation’s premier shooting sports resort. Complete with a 15 Station Sporting Clays course, 5 Stand, Pistol and Rifle Ranges out to 1,000 yards, and two 3D Archery Ranges, the Rockcastle Rangers SASS Club has recently been added to the family resort.

Park Mammoth Resort was built in 1964 and continues to operate as a 2,000-acre golf resort and family recreation destination. Nestled among the wooded ridges and valleys of the historic property, it is located in the heart of Caves, Lakes, and Corvette region of south-central Kentucky.

THE STOWAWAY

This is a six-gun cart (or four-gun) that stores inside itself. Therefore the name, "Stowaway." The addition of outriggers make this small four-gun a six-gun cart with no increase in size. It also has adjustable top and bottom long gun separations.

The top box, handlebar, outriggers, and sides can be stowed in the bottom portion of the cart. The front box hinges are recessed so when the back cover is in place you have a snag free flat surface to set a suitcase, hat boxes, etc. for even more useable space.

Don't need a six-gun cart? Then get the four-gun Stowaway. You can always add the outriggers later if needed.

The four-gun Stowaway is $295.

The six-gun is $310.

Outriggers, if purchased later, are $16 per set.

(Two sets needed for six guns.)

Please see Regulator Rude or call his cell phone: 772-418-3455.

The Stowaway configured as an optional six-gun cart.

Everything is stored inside the bottom box for transport.

To move the cart on the ground in the stowed position, an aluminum handle is provided. Hook it in the front hasp where the lock would go, and you're ready to roll. The handle can be stored inside the cart as well.

The jump from four to six-guns is accomplished through the use of optional outriggers.

This photo shows all the components stored inside the bottom box.

The size differential is clearly seen here with one cart in the stowed configuration and the other in the fully assembled configuration.

DEADLIEST PISTOLERO IN TOMBSTONE IS Texas Mac!

By Texas Flower, SASS Life #43753

Texas Mac, SASS Life #43494, won the 2010 Deadliest Pistolero Contest in Tombstone, Arizona during Helldorado Days.

It all began when we decided to attend the SASS Arizona State Match, Bordertown, in October. While planning our trip to the match, we realized Helldorado Days, an annual celebration in Tombstone, was the weekend before Bordertown. We planned to stay in Tombstone while shooting the match since the range was near town. Never having been to Helldorado Days, we decided to include both events in our trip.

The contest was held during the three-day Helldorado weekend. A Tombstone shooting gallery/gun shop sponsored the indoor shoot. Contestants were required to use a .45 Colt caliber single action revolver, barrels up to 7 1/2" with fixed sights. Shooters had the option of using their own guns or ones provided by the gun shop. Texas Mac chose to use the guns provided. The wax bullets were supplied for all shooters. Having participated in the SASS Convention Indoor World Championship, Texas Mac had some experience shooting wax bullets.

For three days, many shooters competed, including some border patrol officers. Shooting at a paper target, contestants were given six shots each try for a possible total of 60 points. Anyone could shoot more than once, but the score received on the most current try counted as the shooter's score. Texas Mac shot twice.

At high noon on Sunday, Texas Mac was named the 2010 Deadliest Pistolero in Tombstone and awarded a very nice engraved trophy at a presentation ceremony in the middle of Allen Street. Needless to say, that was one happy cowboy!

Winning the competition was a nice addition to our visit to Tombstone, and our trip to attend the SASS Arizona State Match, Bordertown, which is a great match! 🤠

GREAT WESTERN II REVOLVERS
 ★★★★★ "THE BEST IN COWBOY GUNS!" ★★★★★

GWII "CALIFORNIAN"
 AVAILABLE IN: .357MAG, 44/40, 45LC
 New Low Price: $420⁰⁰

EMF's 1873 Great Western II "Californian" is manufactured by F.LLI PIETTA in Italy. These guns feature hammer forged steel barrels and frames that are drop forged and then CNC machined. Additionally, they have wider rear and larger front sights for faster sight acquisition. Just like the original Colts, these revolvers have a firing pin in the hammer and casehardened frames. This combination of traditional aesthetics with the best modern technology makes the Great Western II the most sought after, durable and reliable single action revolver on the market today.

GWII "ALCHIMISTA"
 New Low Price: $550⁰⁰

AVAILABLE IN: .357MAG, 44/40, 45LC
 5 1/2" OR 7 1/2" BARREL

Named the SASS Product of the Year in 2008, the "Alchimista" combines the traditional GWII 1873 frame with the 1860 Army Grip. It features a wider, set-back competition trigger and checkered walnut grips.

CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST WESTERN FESTIVAL

By Stacey Blackwell

Glitz and glamour have long been Palm Springs' calling card. So, now cowboys? The first year of the Palm Springs West-Fest and Rodeo, 12,000 people showed up for the fun. This year, they're expecting many more as they kick off a Western World's Fair this spring. From March 24-27, on 25 acres in the middle of Palm Springs, there's non-stop entertainment for every cowhand.

In the past, Palm Springs was known as a cowboy's haven. Back in the "hay days" of the mid-20th century, regular Western activities were held to promote Palm Springs and raise money for charities with rodeos, parades, trail rides, Desert Circuses, and cowboy balls several times a year. Luminaries such as Gary Cooper, Bob Hope, and Frank Bogert rode horses and donned upscale Western duds at these glamorous social events. Now, the cowboy glitz has returned.

The late Cowboy Mayor Frank Bogert is credited with building Palm Spring's reputation as a hot spot for celebrities. The four-term mayor snapped photos of the rich and famous playing at local resorts for Life magazine in the 50s. But at heart, he was a cowboy.

An article written in 1960 by Ray Corliss described his dress as, "Rodeo Renaissance. Plus some Vaquero. He buys his belt buckles by the pound and his boots by the hundredweight." Some of the events during the WestFest weekend take place at the Bogert rodeo arena that carries on the legacy that he loved.

This WestFest is billed as a "Fantasy Camp for Cowboys" where "Old West meets the New West." This fandango is full of everything from Western fashion shows to trail rides, non-stop Gene

Another Rebuttal To “Real Cowboys Shoot Duelist”

The December '10 letter, “Real Cowboys Shoot Duelist,” on Page 14 by J.P. Lower requires rebuttal.

Having action work done does not make a gun “sissy.” Action work aids in the longevity and overall function of the firearm. Unaltered guns do not very well withstand the cycling and firing of thousands of rounds a year, nor dry firing thousands of times. Additionally, using two hands on a handgun is not “sissy.”

Shooting and competing are two very different things. Perhaps the letter writer plays the game only a few times a year and does not understand that some of us play the game dozens of times a year. Shooting with stock guns is not a bad thing; neither is competing with altered guns.

Since the beginning of time people have attempted to go faster. The thrill of competition is passionately enjoyed and thrived upon. Cowboy Action Shooting™ has not degenerated into Cowboy IPSIC; rather some of the players have evolved into competitors, and even drawn other competitors from other gun sports.

Competitors do not complain that it takes three hours for three minutes of shooting. We don't whine about someone slowing down the whole process with their extremely long preparation time and loading rituals, nor whine when they fiddle with their guns and fuss about every single empty cartridge at the unloading table, thus slowing the whole posse. Whining about slowpokes would be as silly as whining about altered guns.

In 40 years of playing all manner of gun games, my four years of Cowboy Action Shooting™ have been the best of times. Our people are friendlier than those in other shooting sports, more helpful, and more respectful of each other. After the first year my guns were altered. The 2nd and 3rd years my skills improved by learning at club matches with the Powder Creek Cowboys in Lenexa, Kansas. I shot the 2010 Nebraska State Match clean, finishing 3rd in the 49'er category.

Competitors respect and admire those who play the game a little faster. The love of competition, the gun handling skills, the finesse, and the equipment to go faster have made this into a great gun sport.

The timer is there for a reason; in the end, the best scores are the shortest times.

If any man called me, or my guns “sissy,” he'd be reminded to mind his manners, and he'd better be smiling if he says it again. Furthermore, let us all hope men such as J.P. Lower are not whining about altered guns to newcomers or anyone expressing interest in our sport. Whining and name-calling shows poor sportsmanship. It is the friendly, helpful, well-mannered people with positive attitudes, and the overall camaraderie that make our competitive sport great and draws new members.

Good Job!

I am confident Col. Dan's in-box has been overflowing with positive feedback to his writing. If such is not the case, I fear for the future of our country. I for one am 100% in agreement. I applaud his writing and the good judgment of The Cowboy Chronicle for putting ink to paper!

Lady Doctor In The Civil War

The article by Major Roy L. Pain, SASS #86012, in the December 2010 issue of The Cowboy Chronicle entitled, Medal of Honor, Mary Edwards Walker Civil War Doctor was quite intriguing. I do not recall ever hearing before of women serving as doctors during the American Civil War. Doctor Walker was truly ahead of her time. My thanks to Major Pain for his most interesting essay. Looking forward to reading his next article.

Comin At Cha Hits The Mark!

I have now attended two Comin At Cha Regionals; the first one I thought was the best Regional I ever attended. But, I still held my decision open until I attended another one. I did this year, and my opinion is the same as last year—they were the best Regionals I ever attended. I talked to other shooters, and they felt the same.

What made them so good? Well, from the minute you enter the Badlands Bar 3 Ranch you are treated like family. T-Bone greets you, settles you in to your RV spot, and welcomes you to his home. I spent the week on his ranch and always had something to do. I have gotten to know many of the members in the Dooley Gang, of which I am one, and they all treat you like an old friend. T-Bone makes it a point all shooters enjoy themselves whether it be shooting, relaxing, or partying. He does not look at the Regional as a way to make money, by charging a shooter for everything they do. Instead, he looks at it as a way for people to have fun and meet new friends. This, I believe, is the original objective of this sport.

I am just saying I hope everyone has a chance to shoot at Comin At Cha at least once. I am positive they will come away feeling as I do.

Let's look at the shoot itself. The stages are shooter friendly. They are set up so every shooter can enjoy them and shoot well. The shoot is so organized no stage ever drags or holds up the rest of the posses. Everyone joins in and helps no matter what the task is. Everyone is treated the same, whether you are a top shooter or a beginner—no favoritism.

Finally, Comin At Cha has a variety of vendors, excellent entertainment, good food, and a great cowboy yard sale—always something to do. My hat is off to T-Bone. I have enjoyed his company at many shoots, and I consider him a friend. When you meet him and attend a Comin At Cha, you will feel the same.

What Was SASS Thinking?

I have a few questions I would like answered. How in the world does a Model 1911 fit into this organization? I have nothing against semi automatic weapons, (I have two), but I believe SASS should be exactly that! There are many organizations that would exclude our single actions, so why shouldn't we be exclusive? Where did the two-gun business enter into it? I've been around cowhands all my life and never knew one that carried two hand guns, (except for maybe a spare in his saddlebag). I always thought the coach gun was used by bartenders and stagecoach guards. I can't figure it in Cowboy Action Shooting.

Quick Ed Eaton, SASS #85095
Vancouver, WA
(The 1911 is not part of Cowboy Action; it's a separate discipline within SASS, sort of like Mounted Shooting. It's a costumed discipline and is close enough in time-period to be held in conjunction with Cowboy Action events. Why have it? Because folks enjoy it, and it encourages membership ... which is what SASS is all about.)

The two-gun business came about because folks wanted to shoot more at a match ... and re-loading a six-gun is a slow proposition for most folks. In the old days END of TRAIL consisted of six stages over three days—two stages a day—for some 200 competitors. It would get dark before we could get 200 folks through the two stages! And, that was using one revolver! Adding a second revolver and streamlining the way we run matches now allows 700 competitors to shoot 12 stages putting lots of rounds downrange over three days, and get through early enough in the afternoon to change clothes for the evening festivities.

Yes, shotguns were used by bartenders and stagecoach guards, but they were also used by the local sheriff to keep the town safe and by untold thousands to put food on the table. Many think if they had only one firearm, it would be a shotgun! Doubles and the Winchester Model '87 are certainly period-correct firearms ... don't even get me started on the Model '97! It was introduced into Cowboy Action at the very first informal cowboy match in Coto de Caza because a few folks had them in the back of their gun safes. It turns out, they're fun to shoot. The rest is history! ... Editor in Chief) 🐾

WHAT WOMEN WORE

Accessories Make the Outfit

Gloves

By Miz Annie Ross, SASS #60919

Gloves were a considered a status symbol by many Victorian ladies. A gently-bred lady wouldn't dream of going outside without her gloves. Victorian women often wore gloves indoors as well, and sometimes they even wore gloves to bed!

Gloves were made in a variety of lengths, three-button, four-, five-, six-, seven-, eight-, sixteen-, twenty-, and thirty-six button lengths. This did not necessarily mean the glove had that many buttons, but referred instead to the length of the glove. Generally one "button" equaled one inch in length. Measurements were taken from the bottom of the glove's thumb seam to the top of the glove.

Gloves were made in a variety of materials, including suede, kid-skin, leather, taffeta, silk, and linen. Some gloves were trimmed with lace at the cuff and others had scalloped cuffs. Some gloves were embroidered.

Beginning in the 1840s, ladies began to wear crocheted mitts. These fingerless gloves came in a variety of colors. During the 1850s and 1860s, wrist length (two-button) gloves were very popular and were worn for both day and evening. They were usually white or ecru in color and often made of soft kidskin. In the 1870s, gloves of up eight buttons in length became popular for evening. Four to eight button gloves in a variety of colors and fabrics were popular for daywear. Beginning in the late '70s and throughout the '80s, long crocheted fingerless gloves were popular. During the 1880s, fashionable gloves became longer, starting at six buttons for daytime and going up to twenty-four button lengths for evening.

Mousquetarre gloves, opera length evening gloves, varied from twelve- to thirty-six buttons in length. These gloves were made with a vertical opening with buttons just above the wrist. This style enabled a lady to slip off the section of the glove covering her fingers and to tuck in into the arm section of the glove.

A word about Glove Etiquette:

Gloves should be tidy, not to be worn if there were holes, rips, or tears in them.

Opera gloves should not be put on in public, by rather in the privacy of the lady's home before venturing out for the evening.

Gloves were not to be removed to shake hands or when one presented her hand for a kiss.

Gloves may be worn during cocktails or teas, but at least the right glove should be removed for eating.

WHAT IS RANK SCORING And Why Does SASS Use it?

By Coyote Calhoun, SASS #201

SASS Premier Scoring Program
by CD Tom can handle
all your scoring needs.

I get a lot of questions about SASS and SASS matches, and one that is frequently asked is, "What is rank scoring and do we have to use it?" As a matter of fact, I was just asked that very question at the SASS Convention.

After I gave my answer, the person said, "Well, why don't you print that in The Cowboy Chronicle?" So, I will.

Let me begin by explaining how rank scoring works. Rank scoring treats each stage in a match as a separate match. It takes each shooter's total score, which is raw time plus misses and penalties, from the stage and puts them in order from fastest to slowest, and then assigns a rank to each score for that stage. If you shoot the fastest, your rank is one for that stage. If you shoot the slowest, your rank for that stage is equal to the number of shooters in the match. Each stage in the match is calculated in this same manner and rank points are given for each score. At the end of the match, each shooter's ranks for each stage are added together for a total rank score. The shooters are put in order of their total rank score from lowest to highest, and the shooter with the lowest number of rank points is the match winner.

Are there easier ways to score? Sure there are! You just take the total time of each of your stages, add them together for an over-all time, and put shooters in order of slowest total overall time to highest total time and the lowest time wins.

So, which one do we have to use? In sanctioned State Championships, Annual Matches, or in Monthly Matches, you can use either. SASS does not have any requirements as to which one you use. There is even a third option you can choose, which is rank scoring within category. In this variation, each category is treated as a separate match and ranks are only applied across each category separately. If there were only ten shooters in your category, the most rank points you could get for one stage is ten. Choosing any of these scoring options doesn't have to be a headache, though, as the SASS Premier Scoring Program written by CD Tom, SASS #10411, can handle them all. All you have to do is decide which one you want to use. So it is not any more difficult in scoring one way or the other.

SASS does require Regional Championships, the National Championship, and END of TRAIL, the World Championship, to use Rank Scoring. The reason for this requirement now is different than when SASS first started using Rank Scoring.

In the early days of SASS and END of TRAIL, stages lacked balance; i.e., you might have one stage with a pistol, rifle, and a shotgun, and then the next stage only one pistol. If you were scoring by overall time, most of your score would come from the multiple gun stage- making it more important. Rank Scoring makes all stages equal in value.

As time has passed and stages have become more balanced, we have found Rank Scoring is still preferred because it rewards the consistent shooter. For example: a shooter with one miss on two different stages in most cases will not receive as many rank points as a shooter with two misses on one stage and one clean stage. We at SASS think this is a good thing as it promotes consistent shooting and not just shooting with reckless abandon. It slows you down just a bit to make sure you hit all the targets. On the other hand, a match being scored by over-all time becomes a speed match, or as I call it, a "foot race." Believe me, you can miss fast enough to win in an over-all time match.

Another reason we continue to use Rank Scoring is tradition. Rank Scoring has been used for a long time. I don't know if it was used at the first END of TRAIL, but it will be used this year, and was used as far back as I can remember. Also, I think Rank Scoring has become just as much a part of the game as dressing cowboy, and that is what sets us apart from the other shooting sports. "Anyway that's my opinion, and it should be yours!" ... just to quote a friend...

Real Cowboys Shoot Duelist

~ Response ~

J.P. Lower, SASS #18563, recently wrote an article titled, Real Cowboys Shoot Duelist.

Come on, J.P., you sound a lot like my grandfather who used to walk five miles to school in the snow barefooted and uphill both ways ... I shoot with many fellows that use .45 Long Colts with seven and one-half inch barrels, always want the pistol targets at least eleven paces out, and the rifle targets at the end of the bay, because that's the way the cowboys did it. Bull! I say. Most gunfights were ambushes with shotguns or rifles, if history is recorded right.

I don't agree Cowboy Action Shooting™ started out as a manly sport with women and children welcome and shooting full house loads until your teeth rattled was the norm. It is, after all, a sport and a competition. You may deride those fast, accurate shooters, but I have observed everybody jumps to it when the buzzer goes off! I am one of those shooters that likes a smooth action on a well tuned firearm because after a few thousand more practice rounds there are some shooters with whom I'd like to catch up ... or, heaven forbid, even beat! In your line of thinking, gun manufacturers in the past had to make guns with heavy springs and rough, heavy actions, however, belt driven machinery and hard to shoot firearms would be hard to market in the twenty-first century.

I have shot with world-class shooters. I love to watch Badlands Bud, and just marvel at his speed and dexterity. I would one day love to beat him like a rented mule, but that ain't going to happen. It does not, however, stop me from trying to get better. I'm just saying you deal with your idea of Cowboy Action Shooting™, and I'll deal with mine—and we'll both have fun!

In a closing note, Gunfighters are the ones with a pistol in each hand and a huge grin on their face; Duelists catch up!

The Story Is The Key ...

Just my take on the article about the Best Western Movies by Palaver Pete in the November 2010 Cowboy Chronicle. I understand fully his comments that movies being accurate in their choice of firearms and clothing make for a very entertaining piece.

However, I feel the original list that was compiled was done so because of the stories that are told, not because of the accuracy of the trappings, and that is the more important element in a great Western. If we are to base our likes/dislikes solely on accuracy, then we need to discount anything/everything that was done by Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, Hopalong Cassidy, and The Lone Ranger as well. That would do away with a multitude of entertainment that taught us right from wrong, patriotism, respect, and decency.

ANOTHER SASS ADVENTURE FOR Bubba Jo

By Rufus T. Bohanon

Hey y'all. It's Rufus T. Bohanan or Bubba Joe for short. The last time I had wroten a letter to y'all I said I might be back in May.

Well, seems I sceered some folks 'cause there sure was a whole lots less people at y'all's little git together place. Bubba Joe Jr. and my purty lil' lady gurl, Nelly Jo, would neither one come with me 'cause they was thinkin' it wuz going to be a-raining. Well, I ain't sceered, and so I come on out. I was a-running late cause I don't knows if you remember me telling you about lil' Rover with a limp from where I accidentally shot him. Well, it turnz out Rover ain't a him—he's a she. He or she has dun went and had a slew of pups right before I left. I told Nelly Jo I thunk he wuz a-getting' mighty fat. Anybody wanna lil' Rover Jr.?

Anyhows, I got there just in time to git in on some of Hash Slinger's, SASS #77432, good 'ole ham and beanz. Those wuz some mighty fine vittles. I was lookin' at that there new mess hall y'all is a-building and boy howdy, is it nice. Itz even got some purty cabinets that somebody told me Dusty Dee, SASS #86597, and Rusty Redneck, SASS #86596, had built. Let me told you, they do some mighty fine work. Heck, they even gave away for totally free a nice lil' dealie that a shooting person can hang their ribbins from. I'll probably need to be a-buying me one of them for my ribbins, too! If'n I EVER git another job I am going to be thinking about gittin' them folks to build Nelly Jo sum new cabinets for our lil' place, too. Seems peoples think I don't have enuff edumacation these days, and nobody wants to hire me!

I wuz wondering around and some of you folks dressed even funnier than last time. There wuz these three fellas dressed like Kung Fu kid or somebody. They said it wuz Mexican or something, but I say Kung Fu Kid cuz I seen the movie once time. They called 'em-selfs Simon Slick, SASS #10728, Christmas Kid, SASS #34945, and Deadeye Duke, SASS #13133—all Senors from down south?? I wuz talkin' to ole Shaky Snatchem, and he said I should look him up if I ever needz new teeth, but I told him I likes mine just fine—all four of 'em. Guess ole Shaky is one of them there dentist. I axed him if he had seen my buddy Lie N Dog, and he directed me up to the jail for some reason. But I didn't see him in there. Where wuz you, lil' Doggie? I sure wuz thirsty!

One feller told me he had done had to change his name—last time I seen him he was Doc Adams, SASS #86567, but now his name wuz Deacon Adams. Nice feller no matter what hiz names are. And one cowboy even had done went and bought him a brand new gun since last time I wuz there. Ole Jimbo had him a really purty blu color of a hat on, a mighty funny looking hat! Sceerrry!!!! J.D. Redeye was sittin' on a stool, and he said if I wanted to see something purty to look up Senor Headstone. I never did find him but, if'n he impressed Mr. Redeye, he must have had on somethang really purty.

Well, I had to leaf before the potluck dinner to go check on my new pups, but I bet it wuz yummy! I didn't really need to eat no way cause I got a food allergy or something. My tummy is really swelling up more and more every time I eat. A

Unlike Cody and Jackson Hole, where tourists flock annually to see the top designers displaying furniture and fashion, the Palm Springs Western Design Expo is just 90 minutes from Los Angeles and Orange County. The Expo is in the Renaissance Hotel ballroom, adjacent to the WestFest grounds. There's also three days of PRCA rodeo and live entertainment.

The TwangFest Stage is live from noon-6 p.m. daily and then again after the rodeo from 8:30-10 p.m. Entertainment includes the Saddle Cats, Harmonicowboy Gary Allegretto, Juni Fisher, The Red Hot Rhythm Rustlers and Michael Tcherkassky. If that's not enough entertainment, there are also mounted shooting contests, a Fast Draw competition, and Mojave Muleskinners re-enacting the past four times a day.

There's also fun for shoppers with the Old West Mercantile and for kids with carnival rides. Two live performance groups play daily during the exclusive Gene Autry FilmFest, which Jackie Autry, Gene's widow, helped to bring to Palm Springs where she lives: "Oh, You Cowgirl!" a documentary by Shirley Morris featuring Juni Fisher, and the "Silver Screen Cowboy Project," a tribute to singing cowboys performed by the Red Hot Rhythm Rustlers.

On Sunday, March 27 there's Cowboy Church in the rodeo arena, followed by a Fiesta del Charro, giving the day a Vaquero flavor ala' Señor Bogert. As Jackie Autry said following last year's inaugural WestFest, "Somewhere Frank Bogert is smiling."

COWBOY MEMORIAL CHAPEL Background & Update

By Palaver Pete, SASS Life/Regulator #4375

Palaver Pete,
SASS Life/Regulator #4375

He knew at once he had to do something about this oversight. The Cowpoke I speak of is none other than Long Jim Hancock, SASS Regulator #47369, a retired lawman living on the left coast of the United States. Soon Jim discovered another Cowpoke who harbored the same concern—where was the Chapel, and wouldn't it be a great idea if we had a Chapel dedicated to the memory of our SASS loved ones and friends who have gone before us? Conveniently, this second Cowpoke known in the SASS community as Maurice 'Mo' Lassés, SASS Life #65309, lived on the right coast, and together they reckoned a "Memorial Chapel" needed to be constructed at Founders Ranch. "Lets work together," they said.

HOW DID THIS ALL START? Well, here's the real skinny: Sometime back a Cowpoke wandering through the streets of Cowboy Town at Founders Ranch in New Mexico sensed something was missing. At first he couldn't put his finger on it, then all at once it hit him—there was no Chapel! What's a true western town without a white steepled Chapel so often seen in the Old West as well as on the silver screen?

Ms. Maggie Jensen, SASS Life #7601, jumped right in to help Long Jim Hancock man the Cowboy Memorial Chapel Booth. Over $2,700 worth of raffle tickets were sold. Lucky Winners are listed on the SASS Web site.

Flint McCloud, SASS Life #3103, Antety, SASS #43598, and Ms. Maggie Jensen all worked hard during the SASS Convention to help sell raffle tickets for the construction of the Cowboy Memorial Chapel at Founders Ranch in New Mexico. Hope to see you at next year's Convention in Las Vegas. Thanks Pards!

"Let's raise the money and get this Memorial Chapel built and dedicated to our departed loved ones and friends. Let's go talk to the Wild Bunch!"

The Wild Bunch listened. They looked at each other and deliberated for all of 30 seconds—their agreement was unanimous: "Let's site the Chapel on Founders Ranch and help these dedicated Cowpokes achieve their goal," they said in unison, and so the Project began. The official announcement and ground breaking for the Cowboy Memorial Chapel was held this past June during END of TRAIL 2010. When the news was announced, END of TRAIL attendees shouted with glee—Vendors immediately joined-in and announced their donations. The Wild Bunch contributed 500 Life Membership raffle chances at $20 a piece for starters—a potential of raising $10,000 (transferable tickets are still available). Worshipers at END of TRAIL's Cowboy Church donated over $600, and individual contributions started to roll-in. The Project was underway—hard work was about to begin, and decisions needed to be made.

Based on the large number of worshipers at END of TRAIL's Cowboy Church, it was decided the Chapel should be at least 30 x 50 or 1,500 square feet in size. Plaques commemorating our departed loved ones and friends would be placed within the Chapel, and in some cases, on the chapel pews and/or other fixtures. Cost of plaques has yet to be determined, so orders and cost of orders are yet on hold.

The Wild Bunch decided the Chapel project should be promoted under the auspices of the Western Heritage Museum, which is a non-profit, tax deductible 501(c)(3) entity. All contributions and donations are tax deductible, and should be made to the SASS Western Heritage Museum, Attn: Cowboy Memorial Chapel, 215 Cowboy Way, Edgewood, NM, 87015. Coyote Calhoun jumped in and offered to list the Chapel project on the Internet at the SASS website, along with a listing of raffle items and instructions for obtaining raffle tickets. Tickets can now be purchased directly at: <http://www.sassnet.com/chapel/index.php>. Thanks Coyote!

Things began to move rather rapidly now—Cree Vicar Dave, SASS Life, #44907, and yours truly joined the committee, and Tex, SASS #4, became the official go-between the committee and the Wild Bunch. Soon it was recognized a "Goal Gauge," was needed in The Cowboy Chronicle to keep SASS members informed as to the donations received versus the amount required for construction. Accordingly, the Gauge can be found in the monthly issues of The Cowboy Chronicle.

Just prior to the SASS Convention, the total monies received and deposited was $17,519, but that was about to change rather rapidly. News of the quality items offered for raffle soon spread throughout the SASS Convention, where Long Jim and his wife, Antety, SASS #43598, set-up shop in the Grand Pavilion of the Riviera Hotel. Convention attendees gathered around, and on closing day of the convention, a total of $2,715 had been collected. Add to that the $164.77 collected at Sunday morning's Cowboy Church and the total amount now (at this article is being written) is $20,398.77! A great start for only six months of collection effort. Thanks, Cowpokes, for all your help and generosity.

Now the task remains to raise another $55,000 to meet anticipated construction cost—estimated at $50 per square foot (1,500 x $50=$75,000). Additional funds required to construct the Chapel will continue to be raised by individual and club donations sent directly to the SASS Western Heritage Museum (see address above), and raffle proceeds. Now that the initial three raffles are completed (see list of items won, along with donors and winners at: <http://sassnet.com/chapel/index.php>), a new inventory of raffle items will soon be posted to the Chapel link on the SASS web site. To whet your appetite, here's a little peek at a couple of the raffle items already donated: a LeMat Revolver from Pietta; one firearm from Ruger, one pair of Chinks from River Crossing, and one firearm from Chiappa—that's just a drop in the bucket as to what you will see before the drawings take place at END of TRAIL 2011. Between now and END of TRAIL, you will have ample opportunity to purchase raffle tickets directly at the SASS web site, where items up for raffle will be listed.

Well, that's about it Cowpokes. What we all need to do now is talk

Whooper Crane,
SASS Life #52745
Mug shot by Deadeye Al

Who's the biggest Mick in the movies?

Oh-Oh, not so fast bucko!

One of my favorite Sidekicks is Victor McLaglen. During his nearly 40-year movie career, he played just about every role you could imagine ...

SIDEKICKS & HEAVIES

Honoring the Saddle Buddies and the Bad Guys who helped make Saturday Matinees so goldurned FUN!

By Whooper Crane, SASS #52745

soldier ... sailor ... boxer ... turn-coat ... warden ... doorman ... you name it!

But, as far as I'm concerned, his most-memorable roles were as Sgt. Festus Mulcahy in Fort Apache and as Sgt. Major Timothy Quincannon in She Wore a Yellow Ribbon and Rio Grande. Now, maybe it's because I've seen these great John Wayne/John Ford classics so many times that that big Irish mug is imprinted on my brain as the most lovable old Sidekick ever.

The only problem is ... Victor McLaglen wasn't Irish!!! He was, in fact, English!!! He was born in Turnbridge Wells, Kent in 1886 to an Anglican Bishop of Scottish descent and his wife.

Victor then grew up in South Africa and, at the age of 14, joined the British Army hoping to do his part for Old Blighty in the 2nd Boar War. He never saw any action in this war—he must have been saving himself for WWI, in which he served with the Middlesex Regiment (part of The Princess of Wales Royal Regiment, donchano).

For a while, Victor made a living as a professional boxer. He even sparred with World Champs Jack Johnson and Jess Willard in exhibition bouts. He said, "They knocked me around pretty good, but never knocked me down!"

After the war Victor decided acting was a more civilized way of making a living than boxing. He played in a handful of silent films in Britain before moving on to "Movie Mecca," Hollywood.

His rough, tough appearance got him roles in dozens of adventure films during the 1920s and

'30s, among them the original Beau Geste with Ronald Coleman and William Powell; John Ford's Mother Machree (along with a bit player named John Wayne); another John Ford classic The Black Watch, in which Victor played a war hero masquerading as a coward, and several more hero-role films prior to his crowning jewel role as a coward/traitor in Ford's insightful film, The Informer.

In this epic drama, Victor's convincing portrayal as the tattletale Gypo Nolan, who ratted on his IRA buddies to the British during The Rebellion, earned him an Oscar as Best Actor in 1935.

Victor portrayed gangsters, soldiers, pirates, and cops with equal ease during the 1940s, but as most of us cowboy wannabes will agree, he was at his best playing a Sergeant in the U.S. Cavalry riding alongside The Duke as they put down all sorts of Indian uprisings in the Old West.

My own preference is his portrayal of Sgt. Quincannon in She Sidekicks and Heavies . . .

Wore a Yellow Ribbon (who continually hides a bottle of “snake bite medicine” in Captain Nathan Brittles’ water barrel) and, who’s scheduled to retire from the Cavalry along with The Duke and, who’s snookered (by The Duke) into initiating a free-for-all fistfight in the sutler’s saloon, in order to prevent him from participating in a dangerous last patrol.

In this great Ford epic, Victor and The Duke were joined by a couple more real good Sidekicks, Ben Johnson and Dobie Carey, along with big-name stars John Agar and Joanne Dru. I always watch it whenever it plays on TCM. I suppose I should pick up a DVD of it to watch between times, but I think The Missus might object.

Now, Victor played Irishmen time and time again throughout his career, but none was as captivating from a general audience viewpoint as that of Squire Will Danaher, Maureen O’Hara’s ornery brother ... who refuses to give Mary Kate (Maureen) her dowry if she marries American Sean Thornton (The Duke) in The Quiet Man.

His hardheaded stand leads to the greatest cross-county fistfight ever captured on film. Victor and The Duke slug it out over hill and dale, rill and rail until finally The Squire sees the error of his ways, caves in to good sense, and agrees to give Mary Kate her “Fortune.”

At the end, The Squire and Sean become fast (drinking) friends and come home together to Mary Kate’s for a family supper. “Hello the house!”

Victor was nominated for a Best Supporting Actor Oscar for his performance in this very special movie.

Victor kept cranking out exciting flicks and TV features until his death at age 72 in 1959. His over 120 films are a great legacy of adventures on celluloid. Most critics agree, he contributed mightily to Tinseltown’s creative output throughout his long career.

Like so many of our old movie pals, Victor is buried at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale, CA. Pay him a visit and be sure to wish him “Top of the mornin’ to ye, darlin’!”

to our clubs about a club donation. One suggested formula is to donate between $3 to $5 per member—a formula that definitely would expedite achieving our stated goal. Should we fortuitously exceed our goal, then excess funds will remain with the Western Heritage Museum to cover future maintenance cost for the Chapel. Cost of Memorial Plaques is still under study. Size (dimensions) of the plaques and the number of lines per plaque and how they are to be mounted is still being studied by the committee. The Chapel will be serving us for years to come, and unfortunately we will be losing our loved ones and friends as the years pass on by, so space and uniformity of plaques are serious and obvious considerations. Announcement of dimensions and costs will be published as soon as an official decision is reached. Once this decision is reached, SASS Affiliated Clubs, as well as individual members will be provided the opportunity of ordering plaques for their departed friends and loved ones.

Keep those dollars coming Pards—you’re a Daisy if ya do.

Whooper Crane,
SASS Life #52745

What's right, Shepherds or Sheep Herders?

As I write this, the media is full of references to the Shepherds who were visited by the Angel Choir on Christmas Eve to announce the birth of Jesus. These guys were tough nuts who were hired to keep an eye on the sheep that provided meat, clothing, and cheese (yes, from ewe's milk) for the folks in and around Bethlehem in Judea.

Besides keeping the sheep

from taking off in all directions, the Shepherds also had to protect them from predators like wolves and eagles (who also liked a little rack of lamb now and then).

Shepherding as a career began back around 4000 BC in Asia Minor and spread throughout Eurasia in the following millennia, moving into Greece, the Middle East, Eastern Europe, Spain, and Scotland as the taste for lamb and the desire for wool moved westward.

Now, you need to know the "pastures" designated for sheep were the roughest and most

Tight and cozy, this wagon took off some of the curse of herding sheep for a living.

mountainous lands ... which the local farmers found lousy for planting crops ... but the sheep seemed to enjoy.

So, when folks on this side of

The Big Pond decided to raise sheep during America's expansion, the more rugged western lands (western Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, etc.) became the ideal areas for headquartering their flocks.

At some point here, the guys who were running the show decided they'd better change their image from the passive, isolationist one personified by the name "Shepherd" to a tougher-sounding moniker to parallel the cattle-pushers name "Cowboy." They picked "Sheep Herder" ... and the name stuck, both here and Down Under (where sheep herding became a really big industry). About the only difference between the old name and the new name was the fact Sheep Herders tended their flock on horseback instead of on foot.

Technology of sorts popped up about this same time. Up 'til the mid 1800's, sheepmen lived in "movable huts" that had to be torn down, moved to greener pastures, and set up again. These were their "homes on the range."

In the late 1800's, some bright guy thought, "Instead of hauling a home in our wagon, why don't we just live in our wagon?" And the concept of the Sheep Wagon was begun.

As you can see in these photos of period-correct replicas built today by Hansen Wheel & Wagon, Sheep Wagons had all the comforts of home with cabinets, bed, stove, lamps, and a tight weather-proof roof. With these Wagons, sheepmen definitely had it better than cowboys, who had virtually no protection from the elements ... and slept on the ground.

Today, Sheep Herders are more apt to choose Pickup Campers or Camper Trailers for their homes away from home, but the clever Sheep Wagons set the stage for comfort out on the range.

If you'd like one of these historic beauties, you can get one for around 25 Big Ones from Hansen's. Your grandkids would love to stay in it the next time they visit, I'd wager ... and you could use it on your next elk hunting trip!

TEN WAYS TO ENJOY Cowboy Action Shooting™

By Singin' Sue, SASS #71615

everyone. We were hooked and became members on closing day.

Then, we sat for a year, waiting for the next END of TRAIL. It finally came. We visited with friends from New Jersey, saw the awards ceremony, and went home. Again, we stayed idle and read The Cowboy Chronicle, waiting for when we could afford the equipment to enjoy the sport. Finally, I got bold and said, "We're going out, and staying on the Ranch. We'll never get to know people or what it is all about until we do!"

That was the turning point! We could only afford a pair of revolvers (maybe by the next year we could get the rifle, and keep our eye out for a side-by-side.) We were on our way, and then what we call, "A God Thing," happened. Someone heard we were looking for a starter rifle, and "So and So" was upgrading, and he had one we could afford! And by the end of the day, someone else was letting go of a 12-gauge! Dusty Lone Star, SASS #31537, lent us a brand new holster he'd bought, led us to some ammo—and there ya go!

Since then, we have been putting our best foot forward, respecting those around us, and remembering how it feels to be the "newbie." With that said, here are ten things that have brought enjoyment for us, and maybe they'll renew your "Spirit," too!

1. Participate. Don't wait until you have all your equipment (many will share while you build). Get involved in the match by setting targets, loading/unloading tables, or scoring. Just participate.
2. Get to Know People. Talk with those in your posse. If you're an "Old Timer," then switch up posses. Shoot with someone new.
3. Help With Set Up. Until you've done the work, you won't know the issues, and you will enjoy a well-run stage all the more, knowing what it takes to make it run smoothly.

4. Get on a List for Work Parties. There is always something needing to be repaired or repainted. Take pride in your area clubs and places to shoot. If it is a city-run range, then volunteer to keep up the area. You'll enjoy the work you put in, and the Range will tend to work more on your behalf.
5. Invite New Folks. Let people know they're welcome to come and see what it's all about. We're not an "exclusive" organization—all are welcome, right?! (Shanley Shooter, SASS #71614, carried applications in his briefcase!)
6. Take an RO Class. An RO class gives you a lot of information, and the more you know and understand, the more likely you'll not make a mistake.
7. Write a Stage, or Two, or Six! New ideas are great. They keep us out of the same old – same old rut. Just have an RO look it over for safety issues.
8. Pick a "Travel Match." Since both of us are still employed, we try to choose one travel match each year. That way we have a great chance to see other match ideas and meet a whole new posse of folks.

9. Stay on Range (if available). You miss so much having to drive back to town after stages are done. If you don't have a trailer, try a tent, or see if someone in the area will rent. Pards of ours from Houston at this past END of TRAIL went online, found a man in Albuquerque to bring out an RV, rented it for the week, and he picked up the RV after the event. We enjoyed their company and a couple of evenings in camp.
10. Stick Around and Socialize. Be it a monthly match or a "Biggie," take time to stick around and socialize. There is a reason most of us shoot—we enjoy it. Visit awhile and you'll find you enjoy a few more things as well. Invite new folks to stay and visit awhile. Remember—the cowboy welcomed all to his fire for a cup and story. L

Whooper and The Missus

ONE POT CHUCK

Cooking Up Some Tasty Grub Like Cookie Did Out On The Trail

By Whooper Crane, SASS #52745, and The Missus

The recipe originated somewhere in southern Arizona where my granddaddy, the original Whooper Crane, rode as a Messenger on the local stage line. In the cold weather, he always looked forward to a big bowl of this stew-like soup when he got back to his home station.

Whip up a big batch at your home station for all your hungry cowboys when they come in from a day of shooting in the cold. You'll put the roses back in their cheeks, believe me.

Ingredients

- Strips of thick-cut smoky Bacon
- 1 Bag of Split Peas
- 4 Cups of Hot Water
- Cup of Black Coffee
- Ham Steak, cut into 1/2" cubes
- Large Yellow Onion, coarsely chopped
- Stalks of Celery, coarsely chopped
- Large carrots, coarsely chopped
- Garlic Cloves, finely chopped
- 1/4 Cup Soy Sauce
- Tbs. Hot Sauce

Lots of good stuff in the soup makes this a very special cold-weather meal!

Now that we're in the midst of winter, (Oh Boy, Winter Range is just around the corner!), it's time to crank out our tried and true recipe for ranch-style split pea soup.

This recipe has been handed down through the family since before the 1880s ... even though it's been adapted slightly to accommodate how we get our provisions today (like getting our ham at Fry's rather than curing it out back in the smokehouse).

The secret to the great "ranch" flavor is smoky bacon and ham. The secret to its heartiness is plenty of veggies to go with the meat.

Red Rock Ranch Soup

Here's what you're lookin' at when the soup's ready to serve!

Directions

- Start up about 15 charcoal briquettes.
- Over medium heat, put on your 10-12" Camp Dutch Oven.
- Lay in the Bacon. Fry lightly, not crisp.
- Take the Dutch Oven off the coals to cool down a bit.
- Remove the Bacon. Cut into 1/2" pieces. Set aside.
- Drain the Bacon grease from the Dutch Oven.
- Put the Hot Water, Coffee, and Split Peas in the Dutch Oven.
- Put the Dutch Oven back on the coals.
- Simmer for 1 hour, stirring often.
- After the hour, start up another 15 Charcoal briquettes.

- Add the Bacon pieces and the rest of the ingredients to the pot.
- Put half the new coals under the Dutch Oven and the rest on top.
- Let your soup simmer for another 1 1/2 hours, stirring often.
- Serve your soup with some hearty bread and butter.
- Enjoy the compliments from your hungry crew.

Note: If you like your soup a bit thinner, add another cup of water with a couple dashes of Soy Sauce.

Next month we're going to try a tasty-looking San Antonio Beef Stew recipe that Charlie Waite, SASS #79885, sent over to us. We're droolin' already! 🍲 competitors grumbled he used unfair tactics in his win. Although it might be the opinion of some folks he's a "gamer" for showing up in only his union suit, match management determined he won it fair and square. A close second was Hank Hills who wore his splendid kilt.

Callahan's at the Shiloh Inn was the location of the Saturday Night banquet, where we were treated to more costume contests, dinner, and dancing. We also presented the side match awards. Once again, Big Iron Buster, SASS #9361, and Ol' #4, SASS #41004, competed in the black-powder shotgun trap side match event and once again they tied for first place. They shot another round of trap to break the tie and once again they tied. So, it was decided they would break this tie by collecting as much money as possible in three minutes from the crowd with the proceeds to benefit the SASS Scholarship fund. As time ran out, Ol' #4 slid on his side across the dance floor with the final dollar. Despite his gallant efforts, Big Iron Buster won by a landslide, and the two managed to raise $267 for the scholarship. Good job guys!

Samuel B. Carpenter made another of his many trips from his home range in Norway to participate in the Regional. He proved he's not just another pretty face by winning the Classic Cowboy Category and taking first place Traditional in the Wild Bunch. Our European cowboys are becoming more and more competitive ... and when the opportunity presents itself, consider traveling to Europe to compete on their turf!

Costuming was highly prized at this Regional, and the contests were close fought! Best Dressed Couple, Hank and Heather Hills strut their stuff!

The Rattlesnake Gulch Rangers added a new drawing for the ladies this year that included a pair of diamond earrings along with a carton of primers, with the proceeds donated to the SASS Scholarship. When all was said and done, between raising money through soiled dove classes, photos, calendars, side match proceeds, Ol' #4 and Big Iron Buster's fundraiser, and the SASS Ruger and diamond earring drawings, the shooters and Rattlesnake Gulch Rangers at the Northwest Regional managed to raise $2,225 for the SASS Scholpetition was Buffalo Wings, SASS #56856, the current Oregon State Champion, who came in second overall. Tillie Dies, SASS #79511, from Colfax, Washington, is the new Ladies Northwest Regional Champion and came in 15th overall. Her closest competitor was Pinto Annie, SASS #27966, who came in 17th overall. This was a hard fought contest, with stage wins spread out among five shooters, Kuna, Buffalo Wings, Mid Valley Drifter, SASS #35724, Shifty Jack, SASS #65353, and Shalako Tucker, SASS #27964, and congratulations are in order to all our winners.

Shifty Jack, SASS #65353, once again designed and ran the Master Gunfighter Shoot Off where the top male and female shooters participated. The winners of the Shoot Off were last year's Regional winners, Mid Valley Drifter, SASS #35724, and May B. Shecann, SASS #58075. Mudflat Mike, SASS #20904, also ran our regular Rattlesnake Gulch Shootoff where any shooter could participate. The winner of this match was our Junior shooter, Kid Koder, SASS #78381.

Many thanks to Lampson International for the use of their stage, One Shot B for the use of his sound system, S.S. EQ., Inc. – Pasco New Holland for the use of the tractors, and the Army National Guard for the use of their tent and tables. We thank our staff and all of the folks who worked as waddies and stage drivers to make this match a success. 🤠

DISPATCHES FROM CAMP BAYLOR

Wild Bunch for Dummies, Costuming

(Part 1, Uniforms of the Mexican Punitive Expedition)

From Wild Bunch Shooters Handbook 2010 Third Edition

By Captain George Baylor, SASS Life #24287

CLOTHING AND ACCOUTERMENTS

SASS Wild Bunch Action Shooting is a combination of historical reenactment and Saturday morning at the matinee. Participants may choose the style of costume they wish to wear, but all clothing must be typical of the late 19th century and early 20th century cowboy and military. Emphasis is put on period US military dress from 1900 to 1916. Period western dress is allowed such as Pike, Dutch, Lyle, or Tector in the closing scene of The Wild Bunch movie (e.g., Western style pants with or without suspenders, and long sleeve western shirt). Vests are optional. Boots must be SASS legal. Legal SASS headgear must be worn. Mexican dress is also appropriate.”

The original intent was for contestants to dress as characters in The Wild Bunch or military of the era. This was soon discovered to be too restrictive and would have kept a lot of people from entering. So, bottom line is you may shoot wearing the outfit you normally shoot in, or you may wear a specifically “Wild Bunch” costume.

Controversial?

Past experience tells me whatever I write about uniforms of the Mexican Punitive Expedition, someone will come on the SASS Wire immediately and tell me I’m wrong, stupid, ignorant, and probably a member of Al Qaida.

So I’ll just admit it (not the Al Qaida part.) I’ve put one or more items here that are not correct.

Uniforms of the Mexican Punitive Expedition

A good reference is The Mexican Revolution 1910-20, by P. Jowet and A de Quesada, illustrated by

US Uniforms

Stephen Walsh, Osprey Publishing.

The man on our left: “1st Lieutenant, 7th Cavalry Regiment. This figure wears a typical uniform for US officers during the border fighting. The M1911 olive-drab Montana-peaked hat has officers’ black and gold cords with two acorn tassels. His wool pullover campaign shirt in a similar shade has four dark brown buttons on the placket, and bears his rank bars on the collar; he chooses not to wear his black necktie. His wool riding trousers are a rather darker olive-drab shade. He is armed with a .45 caliber Colt M1911 semi-automatic pistol in a cavalry-type swiveling russet brown holster with ‘US’ embossed on the flap, and secured by a long khaki lanyard looped diagonally around his torso. The M1912 belt also supports a double pistol magazine pouch and is itself supported by a pair of leather suspenders.”

Center: “Dispatch rider, 1st Provisional Motorcycle Company. The motorcyclist wears a M1911 olive-drab knit wool service sweater with two open hip pockets, worn over the soldier’s campaign shirt and cavalry-style wool trousers. Bandanas were often sported by American soldiers. His goggles are commercially manufactured—The US Army never issued them for Mexican border service. His equipment is limited to the M1910 cartridge belt, leather cavalry style gloves, and cavalry brown leather leggings worn over the russet brown shoes. Slung across his back is his M1903 Springfield and on his right hip is a non-regulation early model dispatch case of olive-drab canvas ...”

Right: “Sergeant, 24th Infantry Regiment. This NCO from the African-American US 24th Infantry wears the M1911 Montana-peak hat with light blue infantry cords, a well-worn olive-drab campaign shirt, wool trousers, and laced khaki canvas leggings, with the M1910 pack, cartridge belt, and first-aid pouch. The bayonet for his M1903 Springfield is carried in a scabbard covered with canvas and a leather chape. He is drinking from his M1910 aluminum canteen. His chevrons of rank on both sleeves are now of more modest size than (the previous uniform).”

The Bad News

Most of the photos of soldiers show they wore wool uniforms in the Mexican desert. The olive-drab material faded badly. Pinkish, or khaki-ish or olive-drab can all be justified. Cotton was available, but even most photos of officers show them wearing olive-drab wool.

Cotton vs. Wool

From Leta at Coon Creek Old West: “re: cotton and wool uniforms. I was looking up something today and ran across this great info on the cotton and olive-drab wool uniforms between 1898 and the end of WWI. This is in the book “Encyclopedia of United States Army Insignia and Uniforms” by Wm. K. Emerson (a great book). Anyway, there’s a whole chapter on cotton uniforms. The khaki cotton was issued in 1898, and the wool one in 1903 for winter only and was very slowly produced and distributed. The cotton one was issued to all enlisted for summer, so there was always a cotton uniform after 1898. It seems “they” had trouble constantly with the dyes for olive-drab and khaki; regs changed every few months it seems ... pocket flaps, collars, five-button, and six-button changed constantly.”

Pocket Flaps

pocket flaps on their shirts.

Leta on Pocket Flaps: "about the pocket 'flaps' on the tan shirt. Looks like 1916. In Vol. III Horse Soldiers, page 180, and also Osprey Men-at-Arms series, "The US Army 1890-1920," color plate E (Figure 2) ... They say the 1916 pattern changed from the 1912 only in the quality of the flannel and the addition of pocket flaps, and could also be made in cotton olive-drab for summer wear. (This often faded to a tan or yellow or green color)."

US Soldiers

The 4th was organized in 1907, and its 1st Battalion was on the Mexican border when Pancho Villa raided Columbus, New Mexico. It was then sent into Mexico to capture Villa. This sergeant is armed with a Colt automatic pistol and a M1903 Springfield rifle. The hat cord indicates branch of service."

Center: "First Lieutenant, 1916"

When wearing the shirt as the outer garment, as was the practice in the campaign against Pancho Villa, the officer's branch of service could not be told. Indeed, a second lieutenant, who did not have a rank badge, but wore plain officer's dress, would wear no insignia at all save his gold and black hat cord that would identify him as an officer."

Right: "Colonel, Inspector General's Department, 1916"

The all- white uniform was worn as a dress uniform in hot climates."

Footgear

Enlisted men were issued M1904 marching shoes. (Figure 3) These, for SASS purposes, look pretty close to modern packer boots if you remove the kiltie. Canvas leggings were worn covering the top of the boot and the trousers almost to the knee. Officers could wear the M1904 marching shoes with leather puttees or custom made brown boots. (Figure 4, shown with M1911 spurs) I've seen everything leather in natural tan (new), brown (aged and polished), and russet.

Campaign Hats

Multiple companies received contracts for Campaign Hats. Officers bought their own. They were generally of higher quality. Some quickly faded from olive-drab to kangaroo. Both Stetson and D Bar J make them in kangaroo as well as olive-drab. (Figure 5 is a D Bar J officer's hat in olive-drab). Brim sizes were from 3" to 5", and crowns from 3-1/2" to 6". General Pershing's hat had vent eyelets. Some hats didn't. A Grosgrain hatband was normal. Acorn hatbands were worn. Enlisted men wore branch colors, yellow for cavalry, blue for infantry, or red for artillery, for example. Officers wore gold braid acorn hatbands.

D Bar J officer's campaign hat

I can find no photographs of anyone, enlisted or officer, wearing any insignia on the campaign hats—no crossed sabers, insignia of rank, or regimental insignias—nothing.

Insignia

Enlisted rank is available from the suppliers listed at the end. For officers, as best as I can tell, modern supply of major, lieutenant colonel, colonel, and brigadier general (the highest rank in the Mexican Punitive Expedition) will work, but lieutenant and captain's bars have changed. You will need antique insignia (Figure 6) to be authentic.

Antique 1916 captain's bars (Discovered by Cowtown Scout) canued with no front pockets but two hip pockets. Like shirts with no pocket flaps, this was a dumb idea for troops on horseback. The front pockets were eliminated to keep enlisted men from putting their hands in their pockets, I suspect. Some photos show trousers with slash front pockets, and General Pershing was photographed with his right hand in his pocket, a vertical opening. Of course, he (a) was a general, and (b) wore custom made uniforms. Some issued for mounted troops had slash front pockets and no rear pockets.

(I'm ignoring the movie uniforms and insignia for now. They were as authentic as Blazing Saddles.) Enlisted men would wear a disc with branch insignia on the left collar and a U.S. disc on the right.

The 1904 trouser belt was canvas. The buckle was a frame of tarnished brass with a tarnished brass tip on the tongue (Figure 7). The shiny brass roller buckle was phased in during World War II.

Tunics

Photos show occasionally the tunic was worn by both officers and enlisted personnel. They were produced in both wool and cotton. Figure 8 shows General Pershing

Ladies' Costumes

Ladies, I haven't forgotten you. Ladies costume will be in a future episode. I've found some interesting ones not yet seen on the Wild Bunch scene.

Conclusion

Wild Bunch is much like Cowboy Action Shooting™ in costuming. You can do the minimum and still shoot, or you can work at being authentic to the era. It's your choice.

Part I addressed the background of the .44-40 cartridge and the Winchester rifles that used it. What follows is "the rest of the story" ...

COLT "LIGHTNING" RIFLE

In 1883, Winchester had cornered the market on repeating rifles and carbines in calibers such as .44 WCF, .38 WCF. Marlin would not introduce its first repeating rifle in any of these calibers until 1888. Manufacturers such as Burgess, Evans, Whitney, and Kennedy had lever guns in the 1880s, but had not achieved the success and popularity of the Winchesters. It was in 1883 that Colt Firearms, maker of the 1873 Single Action Army revolver, decided to again try their hand at the repeating rifle market.

Colt, by the way, had initially entered the repeating rifle market, long before Winchester firearms even existed. In 1839, Colt produced a total of 360 Patterson revolving carbines, based on the Patterson revolver design. These were used effectively in the Second and Third Seminole Wars in the late 1830s to late 1850s. During the Civil War, Colt produced 15,000 large bore, five shot, .56 caliber Model 1855 revolving rifles for the Union Army. By the early 1880s, Colt had long abandoned the manufacture of revolving rifles, due to a lack of popularity, in part due to their revolving rifle's nasty habit of "chain firing" all the chambers with disastrous results to the shooter!

Colt now shifted its rifle efforts to producing a lever action, repeating rifle to compete with Winchester. In 1883 Colt introduced the Colt-Burgess lever action rifles and carbines in .44 WCF. They sold a total of approximately 6,400 of these Colt-Burgess rifles before discontinuing them in 1885. The primary reason

PART II

Colt ceased production of the lever-action Burgess Colt rifles was a "Gentlemen's Agreement" between Colt and Winchester. The Winchester Company representatives showed Colt representatives a prototype of a double action, large bore revolver Winchester had just designed. Winchester was ready to introduce it to compete with Colt's revolvers. If Colt agreed to drop production of the Colt Burgess rifles, Winchester would not produce the large bore revolver. Colt agreed to discontinue production of lever action rifles.

It was a good move on Colt's part, as this agreement was probably more beneficial to Colt than Winchester. The Colt Burgess lever action had only had modest success when introduced. Winchester was well entrenched in the repeating rifle market. Winchester also had the manufacturing capability and brand name reputation that gave them the ability to give serious competition to Colt's handguns with their new double action pistol, if they had produced it. This gentleman's agreement, however, did not preclude Colt from producing slide or pump action rifles. I am sure Colt made the agreement with Winchester to stop producing lever action rifles, knowing they had plans for a new type of pump action rifle. It was 1883 when W.H Elliot, C. J. Ebbets, and W. B. Franklin applied for the basic patents for Colt to make the pump action for a repeating rifle. In late 1884 or early 1885, Colt released it as the Lightning pump action rifle.

There were two basic frame sizes at first. One was a small frame .22 rimfire. Most of the small frame .22 rimfire Lightnings were made with 20 to 24 inch octagonal barrels. The other size frame that was originally introduced was a medium frame that came in .32-20, .38-40, and .44-40 calibers. These middle sized framed rifles came with either round or octagonal barrels 26 inches in length, with a full length magazine tube. They also produced a 20-inch "Baby Carbine" version in the medium frame that weighed less than six pounds.

In early 1885 Colt's new Lightning had gotten off to a rough start. Feeding and ejection were a problem with the initial production guns. The revolutionary pump action rifle had been released before all of the design flaws and production procedures were worked out. Early customers were frustrated by mechanical problems with the new Lightning. Colt was flooded with letters from retailers and customers complaining about the rifle and its inherent feeding problems. Colt quickly re-engineered the Lightning, rectifying the problems in subsequent production guns. Colt also repaired the guns already retailed at no charge to the customer. The reputation of the Lightning would improve after the improvements were implemented.

In fact, despite the troubled and slow start, the Lightning went on to become very popular indeed. Demand for the Lightnings increased dramatically. By 1898 more than 186,000 Colt Lightnings had been manufactured. That exceeds the number of Marlin lever action rifles produced during that same time period, making the Lightning pump second only to Winchesters in sales. The 1895 Montgomery Wards catalog lists the "Colt's New Lightning Magazine Rifles" in various calibers from .22 to .44 for $11.80. This was exactly the same price they charged for Winchesters. Because of this popularity, most wholesalers and retailers in the West carried the Colt pump rifle on their shelves to meet demand.

There were many Lightning fans in the West. Buffalo Bill Cody and Annie Oakley sometimes used Colt Lightning pumps. Period photographs of cowboys and lawmen with Colt Lightnings are plentiful. A pard of mine that worked with me at Riverway Ranch Camp in the Kings Canyon area had a Lightning in .38-40 that belonged to his grandmother. She carried it in a saddle scabbard when riding out of the California mountains to school in the early years of the Twentieth Century. Those were rough times in that remote area. MARLIN FIRING PIN "Fix"

By Blackthorne Billy, SASS #74914

The Kit for Marlin One-Piece Firing Pin & New Springs

Blackthorne Billy,
SASS #74914

Back in 1997, I became interested in shooting Cowboy competitions. I found a late year production Winchester 1897 that was priced right at a gun show, bought two new Ruger Vaquero .44-40 revolvers, and placed an order for the brand new Marlin 1894 Cowboy in the same caliber. After two months waiting, I received the first .44-40 Marlin that came into the Chicago region. (I have since moved to Michigan, where there are far less restrictions on firearms ownership for LAW-ABIDING citizens.) Each of the firearms has had the occasional "burp," but the Marlin first gave out on me in October during our last competition at Hidden Valley Cowboy Range near Sturgis, MI. Third stage, last rifle shot, "click." I thought I'd short-stroked it, and worked the lever smartly and expelled a live round. My Timer instructed me to load another live round, but since I hadn't taken any extra cartridges to the stage firing line, I took the "miss." Drat!

On the next stage, when switching to the Marlin, the first trigger pull yielded a sad "click." I levered it, pulled the trigger, and another click. Uh oh, broken firing pin, I surmised. Fortunately, my buddy, Sauk Trail Mike, SASS #73580, offered to let me use his 1873 to reshoot the stage and the final two stages, even providing the ammo, since his '73 is a .38 Special.

The Marlin uses a unique firing pin design, consisting of three pieces, which isn't a faulty design, but with a couple other details, it contributed to the failure to fire. Cowboy loads, by SASS practices, are low-power, low velocity. In many instances, the pressures created upon firing aren't adequate to fully expand the case to fit snugly and seal the chamber, allowing high pressure hot gas to escape back along the case and the firing pin, carrying spent powder residues into the mechanism. Over time, and not taking the pains to thoroughly flush the bolt/firing pin assembly regularly, these residues had jammed the firing pin slot and coupling, preventing it from striking the primer. My bad.

Another Cowboy buddy, Triple Threat, SASS #62108, suggested replacing the factory 3-piece firing pin with an aftermarket one-piece, solid pin. (The source is "Cowboys and Indian Store," Santa Ana, CA (www.cowboysandindianstore.com).

The pin, replacement hammer spring, and replacement lever detent spring is $35, plus the usual shipping/handling and sales tax: $46.06 total. Totally worth it. Triple Threat and I took the Marlin apart, removed the originals, installed the replacements, and did a little judicious emery cloth work on some areas that showed some machining roughness, as well as a few burrs.

The job takes a little mechanical aptitude, but with two heads and four hands, after 45 minutes or so from start, the Marlin was back in one piece. Racking the lever exhibited a super-smooth ease of operating, and we went to Triple Threat's South Forty home range to verify our efforts were correct. Badda-bing, badda BANG, bang, bang, bang!

While the factory three-piece firing pin works very well under normal conditions, it does lend itself to problems, particularly for Cowboys running low velocity loads that don't fully seal the firing chamber. The one-piece firing pin helps immensely; however, it does not totally eliminate the possible problem. The bottom line is, at least every 100 rounds, remove the Marlin lever and bolt. Flush the bolt and rifle internal working areas with "Break-Free" aerosol foam cleaner. Great stuff! Use "Q-Tips" to swab all interior areas where there is part-to-part movement. Lubricate judiciously. In the bolt firing pin slot, use the lightest possible oil or a synthetic, especially if you shoot in cold weather. Then you won't get scored with a miss when it doesn't go "bang." Also, if you are getting that black smudge on the outside of fired cases, you might increase the powder by another grain or so to eliminate cumulative problems.

RESTORING A VINTAGE Airstream Trailer

Part 3 ~ Axles

By Cree Vicar Dave, SASS Life #49907

CREE VICAR DAVE ~ SASS LIFE #49907

A few weeks before we set out on our six-month Cowboy Action voyage in our newly rebuilt 1969 Airstream trailer, the Vicar's Wife and I were putting the finishing touches on it—curtains, window shades, and having inlaid vinyl installed. Gold Tooth Dave, SASS #86266, mentioned the trailer looked like it was lower on one side than the other. We measured, and sure enough, there was almost a one and a half inch difference.

On closer inspection, I noticed the axles didn't seem right. When we jacked it up there was hardly enough clearance to remove the tire.

New axles installed

The Airstream trailer does not utilize a metal coil or leaf spring. Its spring action is a square steel tube filled with rubber, and a square steel bar extends out to an arm that has a spindle attached to it. Over the years the rubber can lose its luster. The axles on our 1966 were OK, but this 1969 had problems. In the old days this was a quick fix. They just pried up the ol' covered wagon with a stout tree branch, blocked it up with a stump, and went to work makin' the parts needed for the job. But with only a couple of weeks before we started out on our shooting venue and winter escape, this was a very large snag impeding our progress. After making a few calls, we had two new axles (with extra load capacity), four new brake assemblies, and four new shocks being delivered. It says in Psalm 20:7, "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God." Axles have come a long way since chariot travel, but my trust is still in the LORD.

We lifted up the trailer and set it on jack stands. Removing the old axles is not difficult, but care should be taken not to break off the shock stud when loosening the nuts. A little heat and some WD-40 are better than having to cut a stud out and weld a new one back in. A thread chaser was used on them, and anti-seize was applied to the threads before installing new shocks. I used new washers and shake-proof nuts on the shocks. A floor jack was used to lower the old axles and lift the new ones in place. Gold Tooth Dave and Matt teamed up with me to install them in a few hours one afternoon. The brake assemblies went on well. I used blue lock-tight on all the bolts. You don't need any surprises going down the road at 60 MPH.

The shocks are a little tricky to install. You can put them on after installing the axles but if so, you need to bend the shock bracket ears back, install the shocks, and bend the ears back straight again. Or before lifting the axle, install one end to the axle and attach the other end when the axle is in place, then tighten the nuts. Make sure the shocks are on the right way!

I soldered all the wires for the electric brakes. In times past, I spent half a day alongside a road in Canada removing clip-on wire connectors, and soldering and taping wires together on a fishing companion's trailer. When the brakes don't work in mountainous country it has the makings of a bad day.

Solid brass valve stems were installed in rims for the "D" rated radial tires. Also, I bought those auto balancing rings that bolt on behind the rims. They worked well until we ventured onto I-40 going to the Oklahoma State Shoot. In their great wisdom, the Highway Department put saw cuts in the concrete that are a perfect match for the circumference of the trailer tires. As a result, the little BBs in the balancers got pounded to one area, and the trailer started to think it was on the basketball court. Needless to say, the auto balancers are no longer being used. I just make sure the tires are properly balanced.

When we finished our four-state shoot circuit and landed in a Georgia RV Park, I noticed the frame in the back had slowly settled in the west. But that's a tale of woe for next time.

I'm glad we had new axles and brake units on before starting on our venture. The trailer pulled and stopped like a new one.

BARBER SHOP BLUES

By Cree Vicar Dave, SASS Life, #49907

There seems to be an allure about a barbershop. There's the BARBER POLE, the BARBER CHAIR, the BARBER SHOP TALK, and all the neat smells that are unique to a BARBER SHOP.

In the old days a barber had to be very dexterous to stay in business. Not only did he have to be ready to give a good haircut, but he also had to be able to perform other jobs like shampoos, shaves, and an occasional surgical procedure.

When I became a teenager, my hair had to be cut just the right way, kind of like the Elvis style. Then a layer of "Butch Wax" was applied around a quarter inch thick. The hair was then combed back on each side to form a DA in the back. It took a good 20 to 30 minutes in front of a mirror every morning to get each individual hair in the correct place on my head.

Getting clipped

How does it look in the back, Meg?

When I was just a little shaver, my mom used to cut my hair. She did an OK job, but I wanted to go to a real barber where the big boys got their hair cut. My first trip to the barbershop had me think that I was on my way to being a man.

Because it was, as they would say back then, "Real cool looking." I would have enough grease on my head that I could stand out in the freezing cold of a Michigan winter morning for a half hour waiting for the school bus with no hat on and not get chilled. It says in Philippians 2:3, "Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit, but in humility consider others better than yourselves." It's hard to believe what people will do for vain glory. Hair today, gone tomorrow.

Well, today things have changed. I now wear my hair much shorter and cover it up with a cowboy hat most of the time. The allure of the barbershop has waned quite a bit. Now I look at going to get a haircut as a chore, not wanting to waste the time sitting in a barbershop waiting my turn to get clipped while I could be loading shells. Also there's the endless process of getting up to speed on the latest MASCULINE BOVINE FECAL MATERIAL, or to put it bluntly, MALE HOLSTEIN SOLID WASTE. Being born on a dairy farm, I already know what it looks like, what it smells like, and what it feels like when it squishes up between the toes. So, I don't need a rehash on a monthly basis.

While pondering all of this in my fertile mind, I overheard someone say that many college students today cut their own hair to save money. Soooo I became the proud owner of a electric/battery hair clipper set. If I'm going to get clipped, I might as well clip myself and save money. There are differing plastic attachments that clip on to the hair clipper to adjust for the desired hair length on different parts of the head. These number from 1 through 8 and there are even tapered ones to go around the

I looked it all over and wondered if I could do it. Then I thought, "I'm not as vain as I was when I sported a DA." So I started gettin' ready to cut hair in the kitchen until I heard a shrill sound in my ears coming from the direction of The Vicar's Wife, "You're not making a mess in MY house!"

So, I hung a mirror outside on the storm door. At least this way I can enjoy the beauty of the great outdoors while cutting my hair. I set up a TV tray to put things on, got the clipper set, and started mowing off my graying hair. I was amazed at how easy the process went. The whole project was finished in just a few minutes and I saved the time, money, and the miles on the car it used to take. I came in as proud as I could be to show off to the missus my new found talent. I asked her how it looked in the back. She said okay without even looking up from the afghan she was crocheting. Then I thought, "What does it matter what it looks like in the back? I can't see the back of my head anyway!"

I've been a cuttin' my own hair for going on six months now. The clippers were paid for after the second cutting. People ask me all the time, "Who cuts your hair???" Probably because they think it's very nice looking. I just expand my chest and humbly say, "I cut my own hair." But then that may be a little vain as well. The other day I had an old timer ask me if I would consider cutting his hair. But I don't remember if he was wearing his glasses at the time. But one thing is for sure; I now have a lot more time and money to do some serious loading for Cowboy Action Shooting™. If ya see me at a shoot, don't ask me to cut your hair, cuz' I found out it's against the law to be a barber if ya don't have no license.

A SALUTE TO Texas Jack Omohundro SASS #151 (Frank Leaman)

By Poke, SASS #4968

When I received my December 2010 issue of The Cowboy Chronicle, I read the story of Frank Leaman, Texas Jack Omohundro's, passing. I knew of Frank's passing before this, and I would like to say a few things about this unique and wonderful man.

I became involved in Cowboy

Action Shooting™ in 1992 and met Frank the following year. He has been a good friend since that time and will be remembered by my family and many other families and shooters.

One thing about Frank is he was a very unique person and a man of MANY talents. Over the years I got to the point where I thought I knew him very well. Wrong! Every time we would see each other he was involved in some new venture. Initially, I was skeptical of some of the things Frank told me. As time and our friendship went on, I learned to believe Frank's stories.

A friend and I go to the Reno Gun show every November where we have several tables of guns for sale. We saw Frank at the show almost every year, and one time he told me how he liked to win money playing Roulette. To say the least I was a little skeptical because most people lose money at the Roulette wheel. That night I met him in the Casino and watched him play Roulette. To say I was not skeptical ever again is an understatement!

I learned over the years to believe the stories Frank told me because they were true. One time early on in our friendship, Frank told me he was a Magician. Again, I was somewhat skeptical until he did one of his magic tricks for me. No more skepticism on my part. Frank really enjoyed doing magic tricks for my wife, Karin, and the rest of my family. Every time he came to town he had a new trick. Frank also entertained at the Horse Ridge Pistoleros' annual banquet.

During the Horse Ridge Pistoleros' annual shoot here in Oregon, Frank would always attend and set up his tent. Frank sometimes stayed up all night either working on a shooter's gun or doing some engraving for someone. When a young shooter came to Frank, he never charged them for working on their guns. Frank also liked to sponsor young shooters as a way of encouraging our youth to become involved in shooting sports.

Over the years, Frank did a lot of work on my guns and engraved several. When my best friend, Big Casino, retired from the Bend Police Dept., Frank engraved a Henry rifle that was given to Big Casino by the Police Association. This is one beautiful gun. Several years ago while at the Reno Gun show, I asked Frank if he could make me an ivory watch fob with a scrimshaw cowboy on it. Several weeks later I received a package in the mail containing an ivory watch fob with a cowboy on horseback at full gallop. What a beautiful piece of workmanship! It's something I will cherish for many years, and something that will go to one of my grandsons.

Frank was also one of the most mechanically inclined persons I have ever met. I think he could rebuild a car engine with a wrench and a screwdriver. I have seen him work on Colt 1877 Lightning pistols when most gunsmiths won't touch them.

I could go on and on about a man I truly admired. To say the least, Frank will be missed by many people. The Horse Ridge Pistoleros and I salute Texas Jack Omohundro, Frank Leaman, and say goodbye to a real gentleman.

(Frank is, indeed, missed! I, too, had many dealings with him over the years, and can't count the times I needed a "laying on of hands" for my percussion revolvers after a Plainsman match and before the main match started. Frank was my "go to" guy during my Frontiersman days—he had a way of setting those revolvers up so they were light and responsive, yet 100% reliable!

Cat Ballou won one of Frank's famous engraving jobs during a match many years ago. I was delighted, of course, and told Cat, "That engraving would sure look good on one of my Colts!" Without blinking an eye, Cat responded, "Yes, it would ... but YOU didn't win it!" She still has that Marlin rifle engraved by Frank, and it looks great!

Adios, my Friend ... Editor in Chief) ♪

THE FORGOTTEN TRAIL

Oregon's Applegate Trail

By Palaver Pete, SASS Life/Regulator #4375

“No other race of men with the means at their command would undertake so great a journey, none save these could successfully perform it, with no previous preparation, relying only on the fertility of their own invention to devise the means to overcome each danger and difficulty as it arose. They have undertaken to perform with slow-moving oxen a journey of two thousand miles. The way lies over trackless wastes, wide and deep rivers, ragged and lofty mountains, and is beset with hostile savages.” Jesse Applegate, 1843

The year 1996 marked the 150th anniversary of the Applegate Trail, the southern route of the Oregon Trail. Over shadowed by its bigger brother, the Oregon Trail, the Applegate Trail is often neglected by historians and seldom mentioned in western journals—thus it is known mostly only to Oregonians and dedicated scholars. The Applegate Trail was blazed in 1846 as an alternate, and hopefully safer, route to Oregon. Three brothers, Lindsay, Jesse, and Charles Applegate and their extended families came to Oregon on the original Oregon Trail during the first major migration in 1843. As the party was rafting through the rapids on the Columbia River just outside The Dalles, one of their rafts capsized in the current, and Lindsay’s son, Warren, age 9, Jesse’s son, Edward, also age 9, along with Alexander Mac (Uncle Mac, age 70), drowned. This tragedy made the brothers determined to save others similar grief and find a safer route to the Oregon Territory.¹

(One of our SASS affiliated clubs, The Dalles Defenders, is located near this historical spot alongside the Columbia River.)

Upwards of 90 percent of our westward bound Pioneers did not know how to swim. Many Pioneers as well as cattle driving Cowboys drowned crossing various western rivers.

By the spring of 1846, the Applegate Brothers had settled in the Willamette Valley of Oregon, planted crops, and built cabins, but they were determined to find a safer, more secure route for emigration. Charles stayed home to care for the family and land. Lindsay and Jesse, along with Levi Scott and ten others, formed a scouting party to be known as the South Road Expedition. On June 20, 1846, they left their valley homesteads and journeyed south down the Willamette Valley through what is now Corvallis and Eugene. They continued on to just south of Ashland, and then turned east, reaching Green Springs Mountain about where Highway 66 crosses today between Ashland and Keno, Oregon. (The Jefferson State Regulators, a SASS affiliated club makes its home in Ashland, while Keno serves as the home range of The Klamath Cowboy’s, another SASS affiliated club.)

The South Road Expedition Party continued on until they reached the Humboldt River, then they turned north along the river for 200 miles. Being short on supplies, Jesse Applegate was chosen to lead the party continuing onto Fort Hall, Idaho to get supplies and inform emigrants about the new (and safer) trail. The others proceeded up the Humboldt to where Winnemucca, Nevada is now located, set up a rendezvous, and rested the stock. The Applegate Trail runs from Humboldt, Nevada to Dallas, Oregon (not to be confused with The Dalles, which is on the Columbia River). Near Humboldt it joins the California Trail, running from near Fort Hall, Idaho to the gold country of California.

On August 9, 1846 a group of as many as 100 wagons set out from Fort Hall to cross the new Applegate Trail. In September, the first of the wagons came across the Black Rock Desert, a treacherous section of the trail filled with Indian attacks, overpowering heat, and very little forage for the animals (see Massacre side bar). Next the wagons rolled into Surprise Valley, then onto Goose Lake and Tule Lake. The party crossed the Lost River on a natural stone bridge; the bridge and a marker to record the expedition are near Merrill, Oregon. The wagons then swung southwest around lower Klamath Lake and on towards Green springs in the southeast corner of what is now Jackson County.

Levi Scott led the wagon train on from present day Ashland towards the Willamette Valley. The rains had started by the time the wagons reached the Rogue Valley and from here on it would be either rain or snow for weather conditions (not much has changed weather wise since then). Brush and trees made the trail hard to clear, but the

THE FORGOTTEN TRAIL MASSACRE

Brigham City, Sept 12, 1859

Editor Deseret News—SIR:-

This morning Milton J. Harrington, wife and child, of Buchanan Co. Iowa arrived here, survivors of the company of emigrants lately massacred by the Indians about 25 miles west of Fort Hall between Portneuf Bridge and the Snake River.

Mr. Harrington makes the following statement in relation to the murderous affair: "Our company numbered 19 persons, 6 men 3 women, and 10 children between 1 and 10 years old. Some of the company was from Michigan and the others from Buchanan County, Iowa. At the last crossing of the Sweet Water, we were advised to travel on Lander's Cuttoff being told that route was nearer, better feed, and safe from Indian depredations.

Our journey was prosperous until the night of the 2nd when we were selecting our place for camping and were making our camp fires. We were startled at the report of a gun, followed immediately by a number of others. We soon ascertained that our rear wagons, which had not yet arrived in camp, were attacked by the Indians. A boy about 10 years old came running to us and said the Indians had killed his father and were killing all the rest. In a moment's time we were surrounded by the savages, whose hideous yells and constant cracking of their rifles at this moment rendered the scene too horrid for description. Those of us who survived made our escape by taking refuge in some rushes and willows on the bank of the Portneuf where we remained during the night. Next day we started on our journey on foot, and after traveling three days on scant rations we came to Lieut. Livingston's company of Dragoons who were escorting a party to Fort Walla Walla, Oregon.

After informing the command of our distress, Livingston sent a detachment of nine men with one of our company to pilot them to the place of the massacre. Upon their arrival, they found the dead bodies of five persons on the ground out of the eight that were missing. The dead were horribly mangled and scalped. One little girl, five-years-old, had both her legs cut off at the knees. Her ears were also cut off, and her eyes were dug out from their sockets, and to all appearances, the girl after having her legs cut off had been compelled to walk on the stumps for the sole purpose of gratifying the hellish propensity of savage barbarity.

Their animals were taken, and their wagons plundered according to the usual mode of Indian spoliation. The names of the MURDERED are:

Edward Miltimore, James Miltimore Jr., Wm Miltimore, Mary Ellen Miltimore, and Myron Cline.

MISSING:

Mrs Miltimore and child three months old and Albert Miltimore.

ESCAPED:

Milton J Harrington, wife and child, A. Hill, wife and child, Geo. Alonzo, Neilson Miltimore, Frank Hubbard, Nathan Titus, and Wm. Marsh."

Respectfully, J. C. WRIGHT

men who joined the Applegate Train had to guarantee to do the road building and clearing needed to be done before more travelers could use the trail. The train lost Meadow Vanderpool's flock of sheep at Rock Point to Indians, and Martha Leland Crowley, a young girl, died October 18, 1846 while the train was moving across present day Sunny Valley, Oregon. The creek where Martha died was aptly named Grave Creek. A covered bridge (built in 1920) still spans the creek. The wagon train continued through the southwestern valleys of Oregon until they reached their final destination in the Willamette Valley. The group had survived much hardship and trouble, but they created a new passage to the Oregon Territory that would be used for many years.

In 1853 alone over 3,500 men, women, and children took this route. Today, Interstate 5, which runs from the Mexican border at Ti-

Henrietta Maria Morse Chamberlain King

HENRIETTA MARIA MORSE CHAMBERLAIN KING was born in 1832 at Boonville, Missouri, the only child of a Presbyterian minister. She moved to Texas in 1850 when her father founded the first Presbyterian Church in Brownsville. In 1854, she married Captain Richard King and moved to the thatched wattle-and-daub dwelling on what was to become the famous King Ranch. The original mud and stick jacal house was eventually replaced by the spacious home on the banks of the Santa Gertrudis Creek.

Captain King died in 1885, leaving Henrietta full ownership of his estate, consisting of 600,000 acres of ranch land and a half million dollars in debts. With the help of her son-in-law, Henrietta paid off the debt and increased the size of the ranch in ten years. She ultimately created an empire of over 1,175,000 acres and made the King Ranch "Running W" brand a worldwide symbol. She developed the hardy Santa Gertrudis breed of cattle, experimented in quarter horse breeding, and discovered innovative dry farming techniques. She donated land and money for railroads, churches, hospitals, schools, and founded the towns of Kingsville and Raymondville.

juana to the Canadian border at Blaine, Washington, travels over this route. The Applegate Trail was designated a National Historic Trail by the US Congress on August 3, 1992. Known as the southern route of the Oregon Trail, the Applegate Trail provided an alternative for settlers who wanted to avoid the perils of the Columbia River. Not all settlers appreciated the trail; some even felt the Applegate's had hindered rather than helped them on their way. Time proved the real test, however. After nearly 150 years the Applegate Trail endures as the basis for the state's major transportation routes, allowing today's traveler the opportunity to retrace the steps of Oregon's early trailblazers.²

The .44 WCF Cartridge (.40-44) . . .

fore that the Daltons had left that area to head back east to Coffeyville, Kansas in 1892 to their appointment with history.

Colt eventually discontinued actual production of the Lightning rifles in 1898, though they were still cataloged and sold until 1902. Dealers and hardware stores would still have some “new, old stock” Lightnings on their shelves for several more years. Throughout production, .44-40 was the most popular caliber in the medium frame rifle.

MARLIN 1888, 1889, AND 1894 RIFLES

Marlin Firearms Company, seeing the popularity of the .44 WCF cartridge in both Winchester and Colt rifles, was not about to be left out. In 1888, Marlin released a new lever action rifle in .44 WCF. The Model 1888 Marlins were “top ejectors” like the Winchester lever action rifles. In 1889, however, Marlin changed the 1888’s design slightly, switching to a stronger, solid top, side ejection system. This has been their trademark design until this day. With minor safety improvements in lever and firing pin, the 1894 Marlin you buy today is nearly identical to the Marlin rifles released in 1889 and 1894.

While actually chambered for the .44 WCF (.44-40) cartridge, Marlin released their own version of the .44 WCF cartridge. It had a 217 grain lead bullet over the same charge of 40 grains of blackpowder. They called it, unimaginatively enough, the “.44 Marlin Cartridge.” Most Marlin rifles were marked “.44-40” rather than .44 WCF so consumers would buy their ammunition instead of Winchester’s. Back then, ammunition sales were a very important part of their business models.

Five years later, Marlin released an improved version of the 1889, called the Model 1894. It has a two-piece firing pin and slightly different locking system; otherwise, it is almost impossible to tell them apart. The 1889 also had a spring loaded lever latch, which is absent on the later 1894. I have owned original examples of both, and there really was very little difference.

Marlin did manage to capture a sizable portion of the repeating rifle market. I have heard their success with the 1889 helped nudge Winchester in the direction of using the improved 1892 action on their rifles. Cowboys, lawmen, and badmen alike used the Marlins in increasing numbers, especially around the turn of the century. Marlins were considered a premium rifle in the Klondike gold rush. Unlike the Winchester 1873, where .44-40 was the most popular, with 1889/1894 Marlin shooters, the .38-40 was almost as popular as the .44-40. At the turn of the Century, the .38-40 caliber enjoyed an increasing wave of popularity as a caliber, especially in the North Woods. The 1894 Marlins had a well-deserved reputation for exceptional accuracy in both calibers. Today, you will encounter about as many .38-40 original Marlins as you will .44-40s.

Marlin’s beautiful Century Limited .44-40 is a marvelous example of the 1894 Marlin as issued in the Winchester developed .44-40.

CONCLUSION

An interesting note is that the 1892 Winchester and 1894 Marlin were so strong that for a time some ammunition manufacturers marketed special “High Velocity” loads of .38-40 and .44-40 rounds for use ONLY in 1892 and 1894s. Instead of the 180 or 200 grain bullet at 1250 FPS, you would get about 1700 to 1800 FPS from the same JSP hunting bullet! Using these “high velocity” rounds in any 1873 rifle, or any .44-40 handgun, however, would have blown the weapon into expensive and lethal fragments. Because of unfortunate mishaps and lawsuits, these “High Velocity” loads were discontinued many years ago.

We often call these “Pistol-Caliber Rifles.” That is really a misnomer. Winchester had introduced the .44 WCF as a rifle cartridge. The fact is Colt, Smith and Wesson, Remington, and Merwin and Hubert released revolvers, after the fact, in these same calibers to create popular “pistol/rifle combos” that used the same ammunition. I have not covered the handguns in this article for the primary reason the .44-40 really is a rifle cartridge, and its main importance in the West was as a rifle cartridge. ♪

END of TRAIL is a match for experienced shooters.

NORTH AMERICAN ARMS: Companion Cap & Ball Revolvers

By B. Gil Horman

My Dad is a fan of black powder pistols. Over the years he has collected some beautiful examples of small, deringer-types fitted for percussion caps. My brother hunts with an in-line muzzle loader, and my cousin spends his weekends at mountain man rendezvous. Black powder has long been a part of my shooting experience, but I have yet to come across anything quite like the guns I tested for this review. They are the revolvers of North American Arms' Companion series, which is to say, the smallest, fully functional, .22 caliber Cap & Ball revolvers currently available on the market.

The most diminutive member of the series is the Companion, which is based on North American Arms' signature single-action .22 Long Rifle frame. Fitted with a 1 1/8" barrel, it has an unloaded weight of just 5.1 ounces. The Super Companion, based on the .22 Magnum

As I opened each of the three Companions' cases, I discovered, along with the revolvers, a package of 30 grain .22 caliber bullets, a powder charge, a nipple wrench, a stickpin with a "T" shaped handle to use as a de-capping tool, and a lock for the case.

Companions' cases, I discovered, along with the revolvers, a package of 30 grain .22 caliber bullets, a powder charge, a nipple wrench, a stickpin with a "T" shaped handle to use as a de-capping tool, and a lock for the case. The Companions don't have an integral ball rammer, so a hand held bullet seater is also provided. Additional bullets and accessories are available from North American Arms, but #11 percussion caps, bullet grease, and powder will need to be purchased from a local supplier. With all of my supplies in order, I set out for the shooting range.

Tolerances are tight on these revolvers! Remington #11 caps reliably seated snug and out of the way, ensuring no "high-cap" binding as the cylinder turned.

The square base of the extended boot grip rested nicely on the pinkie knuckle of my shooting hand, which aided in aiming and stability.

Since none of these percussion revolvers have an integrally mounted ram, the cylinder must be removed and a manual press employed to seat the bullets.

The three Companions tested—(lower right and going counter clockwise) the Companion, the Super Companion, and the 1860 Companion. Lots of fun in small packages!

frame, sports a 1 5/8" barrel and weighs in at 7.1 ounces. The latest addition to this series is the 1860 Companion. This frame was originally introduced as the "Earl," which is available as a .22 Magnum or convertible .22 caliber rimfire. However, the frame was destined to become a unique Cap & Ball revolver for black powder enthusiasts. It is as near to a perfect miniature replica of an 1858 Remington as a revolver can be at this scale.

As I opened each of the three

Put On Your Cap

To start the shooting cycle, I removed the Companion's cylinder from its frame and used the nipple wrench to check the tightness of each nipple. It's important to have them snugly set, but not too tight, since they need to be removed for cleaning. I set a percussion cap on each nipple, without loading the chambers, and fired all five caps down range. This blows out any excess oil, moisture, or dirt from the nipples. I also learned an interesting lesson from this exercise.

The Companions are built to tight tolerances and with nipples that are recessed into the cylinder. As a result, not all percussion caps will operate successfully with these revolvers. As I tested a variety of caps, I learned that some brands contain minor variations in the thickness of the primer compounds. Though these slight differences are rarely ever an issue with traditional black powder pistols, a cap that sticks up a little too high from the nipple recess of a Companion will cause the revolver to jam.

I had the best results with the Remington brand #11 percussion caps. They all seated to a uniform depth in the nipple recesses and allowed the cylinder to rotate freely. By the way, the occasional burst percussion cap will also jam the gun. Rather than trying to cycle past it, just remove the cylinder, brush away the problem cap, and then finish firing the set.

Loading Up

With the nipples fired and the percussion caps tested for function,

I was ready to put the guns to work. As it turns out, loading a Companion is a little more manually involved than some guns, so being able to sit down while loading can be helpful. Unlike full sized Cap & Ball revolvers, which are loaded while fully assembled, the Companion's cylinder is removed from the frame for loading. It's important to ensure that no percussion caps are placed on the nipples at this stage.

A small plastic bowl will come in handy when loading your powder. It provides a clean surface for the cylinder to rest on and it will catch any grains of powder that try to escape. Another shooter at the range thought I would need a funnel to get the powder into the .22 caliber chambers, but the powder measure did a good job all on its own when I didn't rush the process. I found the best approach for getting the powder where I

A few drops of Otis Ultra Bore on the frame-mounted firing pin every 15 shots or so kept everything well lubricated and working.

Stay Loose

One of the differences between the Companion revolvers and the Mini rimfire models is the configuration of the firing pin. The rimfire models have a hatchet-shaped firing pin mounted on the hammer, while the Companions have a spring loaded, frame-mounted firing pin. When firing the Companions, a drop or two of lubricant placed on the firing pin about every fifteen shots keeps the pin from seizing up with powder fowling.

Though it's not specifically marketed for use with blackpowder, the Otis 085 Ultra Bore proved to be just what I needed. It kept the firing pin loose, it didn't gum up the works while shooting, and it proved to be easy to clean afterwards. Though blackpowder firearms are bathed with soap and water to remove powder fouling, the Ultra Bore is also handy for that final light coat of oil used to prepare a blackpowder pistol for storage.

wanted it was to cover four of the five cylinders' chamber mouths with the index and middle fingers of my left hand while I poured the powder using my right. This prevented any powder from spilling into the other chambers and created a "V" shaped channel to catch any loose grains until they could be chased into place.

A correctly measured portion of powder fills the chamber up to the interior ridge that circles the chamber wall. This ridge works to keep the bullet from being seated too deeply. No patch or wad is required. It's simply a two-step process of pouring the powder and seating the bullet with the hand held tool.

With all five bullets seated, I used the tip of my finger to lay a coat of grease across the top of the cylinder. The grease works to lubricate the bullets and to prevent chain firing. Out of curiosity, I tried different greases, including store-bought bullet lubricants and vegetable shortening. All of them did the trick, so it's just a matter of preference. Shortening is cheap and readily available, while the bullet lubricants are formulated not to run

While the Companions work well with blackpowder, I prefer the more stable substitutes of Pyrodex P and Triple Seven. They both worked wonderfully and clean up was a breeze.

Hodgdon Powder

Hodgdon produces some of the best propellants available for blackpowder shooting. Though the Companion revolvers can shoot real blackpowder, I prefer to work with the more stable substitutes. The Pyrodex P (the P stands for Pistol) is an old standby that burns reliably, produces dependable results, and is not too difficult to clean up.

Recently, when my brother was sighting in for the deer hunt, he introduced me to Hodgdon's Triple Seven products. He likes the results the pellet version yields in his in-line muzzleloader. I contacted Hodgdon and asked if the powder version of Triple Seven would run well in the Companions. They said it would, and it did. In fact, I shot one of the Companion revolvers exclusively with Triple Seven to test their claim of water-only clean up. The sulfur-free powder residue rinsed right out of the bore and off my hands. I'm not ready to give up Pyrodex P just yet, but I am looking forward to working with Triple Seven in the future.

 in hot weather. Once all of these steps were completed, I set the percussion caps and proceeded to fire.

Shooting the Companion Revolvers

Though I knew the Companions would be interesting to shoot as a group, I was surprised to find that each one had a distinctive personality. The Companion is clearly an exercise in black powder miniaturization. How small can a Cap & Ball revolver be, function reliably, and still be enjoyable to shoot?

The Companion answers these questions nicely. Though it is tiny in every respect, it has just enough of a grip to hold on to and just enough power to make it fun to work with. It quickly caught the attention of other shooters on the range. Though folks were interested in all three revolvers, they usually wanted to hold the diminutive Companion.

The Super Companion, with nearly double the powder charge of the Companion, spoke with more authority than its little sibling. The longer barrel and grip did make it easier to keep shots on target. The Super Companion offers a balance of greater shootability while maintaining an exceptionally compact size. This model would be ideal for some pleasant informal shooting while out on the trail.

My favorite discovery at the range was the performance of the new 1860 Companion. The 4" barrel placed bullets to point-of-aim all the way out to 15 yards. That's a solid level of accuracy for some full sized pistols, let alone a miniature like this one. I rarely had a wandering shot. The square base of the extended boot grip rested nicely on the pinkie knuckle of my shooting hand, which aided in aiming and stability. This is the model that most closely replicates the experience of shooting a traditional black powder revolver, but at about 1/3 of the scale.

Whether you are a fan of black powder shooting or a follower of North American Arms Mini revolvers, the Companion series has something for you. Be sure to read your owner's manual and to have a clear understanding of all the supplies you need before you head to the range. To learn more about

Cornbread Mama, SASS #74685

By Stick, SASS #63181

Kay Geisen
Cornbread Mama, SASS #74685

When I began shooting with SASS in January 2005, my wife, Kay, did not like guns. However, her love for me overshadowed her dislike, and she indulged me. My first group was Cross Creek Cowboys of Fayetteville, NC. Kay wanted to join me in participation, but she had no desire to shoot. She really enjoyed cooking, so she became Cornbread Mama, SASS #74685. The Cross Creek Cowboys later moved to Wagrarn, NC. Although this was a greater distance, the cowboys and cowgirls of Cross Creek were more like family to us.

After an emergency family trip to Alabama, Kay said she was having problems breathing and catching her breath, so she went to her doctor. The doctor told me she had fluid on her lungs, and he was going to hospitalize her in order to relieve it. As it turned out, she had lung cancer, which was already in metastasis. On 11 April 2009, my beloved Kay—Cornbread Mama—passed on to her next life.

In excess of 250 people were in attendance for her service on the 18th of April. There were more cowboys from Cross Creek and other chapters in southeast North Carolina than Rotary members—rather ironic since she was the President of the Rotary and the cook for the Cowboys! The cowboys have been wonderful in their support of me, even the ones here in Alabama, where my family is and I have now resettled.

She is missed every minute of every day, but especially whenever I go alone to a Cowboy Action match.

Peaceful, SASS #256

Territorial Governor
High Sierra Drifters

It saddens me to announce Peaceful, SASS #256, aka Dexter O'Day, passed away on Thursday, October 14, 2010 after a brave fight with cancer. Peaceful was a long time SASS and Rendezvous shooter, and was President of the High Sierra Drifters Cowboy Action Club and West Point Rod & Gun Club. Although he has moved on to that big open range above, those of us who remain behind will have fond memories of being part of his life. Peaceful will be greatly missed.

Star, SASS Life #5444

aka Joseph Roark

October 30, 1935 – December 3, 2010

By Kiowa Jim, SASS #17735

To all who knew him, Joe Roark personified the Cowboy Way. Joining SASS as a Life member in 1996, he chose the alias “Star” in tribute to all the heroes of the “B” westerns whose personas he would recreate.

He assembled the costumes of stars such as John Wayne, Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, and Sunset Carson, and characters such as Hopalong Cassidy, the Lone Ranger, and Zorro. Each was complete to the smallest detail, including the tooled leather gun rigs, guns, and boots worn on the Silver Screen by the heroes he admired. He became an accomplished leather craftsman in order to build some of the accessories himself.

He loved playing cowboy. He proudly assumed the characters of his childhood heroes, and kept those characters pure and true to the originals. He carried their personas into children’s hospitals, museums, gun shows, and western film festivals to promote the ideals and spirit of the Cowboy Way and playing the Game.

Love of country is part of the Cowboy Way, and Star served his for more than 40 years, going from a 20-year Air Force service that ended in 1975 to a second career in civil service from which he retired in 1997.

From his home ranges with the Mississippi River Rangers in Byhalia, MS and the Memphis Gunslingers in Memphis, TN to a life m e m - bership in the Double R Bar Regulators in California where Roy Rogers once played cowboy off-screen, he took part in SASS competitions and activities all over the country. Always a gentleman even in competition, he made friends everywhere and “never met a stranger.”

He leaves his wife of 57 years, Beverly (whom he called “Boss Lady” in SASS circles and elsewhere), two sons, Michael Terrence and Mitchell Travis, one grandchild, and three great-grandchildren; also his mother, a brother, and six sisters. And, a lot of friends and fellow cowboys who will surely miss him!

Shootout at Coyote Gulch

By Pit Mule, SASS #29220

Indianola, Iowa – Welcome to Coyote Gulch, home of the Fort Des Moines Rangers. Our range is located in the gentle rolling hills of south-central Iowa on property owned by Randy and Ann Jimenez of Central Iowa Shooting Sports. Coyote Gulch is a spacious, secluded, ten plus acre layout with twelve stages on a 600-foot long firing line with permanent stage fronts. It's an ideal spot for Cowboy Action Shooting™, set in a natural valley surrounded by 225 foot hills. This is where the Old West comes back to life, and the Shootout at Coyote Gulch fills the valley with gunfire and smoke.

Around high noon on Friday June 4th, shooters from near and far drifted into the range, looking to get in some practice before the shootout.

They came from Tennessee, Missouri, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. Good thing Cowboy Action Shooters are hearty folks; it turned into a hot afternoon. Even though it was hot, everyone still had a great afternoon, taking part in the side matches, hooking up with old friends and acquaintances, and getting in some shopping.

Miss Kitty Morris, SASS #74587, greeted everyone checking in for their shooter's packets and made sure they knew what was going on with the match. Each year we try for something a little different and fun to do along with all the usual great side matches. Range Coordinator and Match Director Marshal Morris, SASS #69898, put a terrific side match together for this shoot. The Magnificent Seven Challenge in-involved the use of seven guns: four revolvers, two rifles, and a shotgun, and could be shot by one shooter or two shooter teams. It was lots of fun! Assistant Range Coordinator Don Tuco, SASS #46748, handled the Wild Bunch side match, a fun addition to any shoot. Don Tuco also brought in a pair of photographer friends to cover the match. James Piper of Pipeline Media Group and Dave Leto did a wonderful job of photographing the match. They set radar as the shooters waited patiently. Bad weather is always a nightmare for us match officials. Why is it as a shooter I don't mind waiting out the weather, but as a match official I sweat it out real bad? We wanted to give the shooters the best start possible, so we waited. Getting caught in the rain is one thing, but starting in it could pose some safety issues. At last the radar gave us an opening to get the match underway, and after a 45-minute delay, the shooters were happily off to start the match. The day cleared off great and all went well from then on. Sunday's finish of the match came off without a hitch, and after lunch we handed out awards and held the Top Gun shoot-offs.

One of the unique parts of the Fort Des Moines Rangers' shooting program is the introduction of the Working Cowboy/Cowgirl and Range Detective Categories. These categories are for new folks and those who cannot for any reason shoot a shotgun. The Working Cowboy/Cowgirl Category requires a rifle and only a single revolver, while the Range Detective Category makes use of a rifle and two revolvers. We've had several folks who don't have or can't use all the standard equipment take advantage of this opportunity to still play the game.

Shooters get hungry and Fort Des Moines Rangers members, Six Finger Jack & family of Tiger Pit BBQ, did a great job on breakfasts and lunches both days. You can't beat grilled, smoked, and Dutch Oven cooking.

Thanks to our vendors, sponsors, and Fort Des Moines Rangers members who graciously volunteered to work the match. And, a big thanks to our neighbor SASS club, the Zen Shootists, for loaning us those "extra targets" we all need now and then.

Finally, a big thanks to you, the shooters. Your attendance and support made this one fun match to put on! We look forward to your return next year, June 3, 4, 5, 2011 at Shootout at Coyote Gulch, the 2011 SASS Iowa State Championship.

HORNADY'S MIDWEST ROUNDUP And Smoke N Steel III

2010 SASS Nebraska State Championship and Blackpowder Shootout

By Dalton Masterson, SASS #51139 LTG

Grand Island, NE - The Platte Valley Gunslingers hosted Hornady's Midwest Roundup, the 2010 SASS Nebraska State Championship, September 3-5, 2010. It was held at Heartland Public Shooting Park in Grand Island, Nebraska. The city-owned range has twelve big berms with armored steel targets, and wonderful semi-permanent, but portable buildings and props. Platte Valley Gunslingers shoot on the 1st Sunday of the month from April to October.

The match started on Friday with some great side matches. Pocket pistol and derringer, and long range were among the "normal" matches, but also included in the fun was a BB Gun match, a .22 match, and several other challenging marksmanship events. Several mini-stages were also set up to get the shooter warmed up for the main match. Saturday's day of reckoning finally came, and the first six stages began. The stages were fun and challenging, with lots of movement and a variety of target ranges. During our daily barbeque lunch, door prizes were handed out to all the registered shooters.

Saturday evening was left clear of any scheduled events to allow cowboys to attend the Nebraska State Fair if they wished. They also had a chance to hit up our vendors row, which was closer to the shooting line this year than previous years.

Sunday started with a brief Cowboy Church held under the tent by Fort Hays Preacher. The shooting commenced for six more stages of Cowboy Action fun in beautiful weather. At the end of the day, we had a total of 88 shooters representing nine states with six of the shooters shooting the match clean. Tex, SASS #4, and Cat Ballou, SASS #55, representing SASS drove all the way from New Mexico to join in the events.

The banquet was held in nearby Wood River at Babel's Barn, an 1840s built barn moved here from Pennsylvania and reconstructed. Prior to the meal was a costume contest judged by Cat Ballou, Terry Lane, and Restless Rose. The meal was prime rib with all the fixings. A tuned Cimarron 1878 hammered double was donated by Run N Iron Customizing, and given away to a lucky registered shooter. There was also a raffle of a Colt donated .38-40 SAA and a Bond Derringer. The proceeds from this raffle went to a permanent shelter for the range. (Continued on next page)

Lonnie Ironwood escaping the hangman! Each stage had a starting line and virtually all had movement.

Ginger Belle on the run! This young lady makes Dad, Gunsmoke, SASS #9118, proud!

Hold on to your hats! Senior Duelist Montana Brown is ready to spring into action!

Dalton Masterson and the pocket Walker! There was no need for any smoke-test challenges at this match!

The last thing Newton, SASS #6188, said was, "Hold my beer ... watch this!"

There was also a SASS Scholarship raffle that raised over $300.

On the following Monday, Labor Day, Hornady's Smoke N Steel III, the 2010 Nebraska State Blackpowder Shootout, commenced. This was a blackpowder only match, with 35 shooters. Seven of them shot the match clean, and one of those was a new blackpowder shooter.

A number of competitors tried blackpowder for the first time at this match. Most, if not all, were pleasantly surprised at the fun to be had, and will be shooting blackpowder more often.

Five stages were shot, with the last two being shot in a mid-morning thunderstorm. The dark sky made for some nice smoke and fire, challenging everyone to see the targets. But, the shooters persevered, and all the stages were finished without a rain delay. We then called it a day, had our BBQ lunch, and awaited the brief awards ceremony, held inside of course.

Stories were shared, new friendships were made, and old friends were reunited. The Nebraska State Championships were an exciting and fun filled event. If you have the time, are traveling through, or just want somewhere fun to go shoot, stop on by and say "hi." We would love to have you shoot with the Platte Valley Gunslingers next Labor Day weekend, where we put the action in Cowboy Action! For more information, please email us at:

SASS COWBOY ACTION MATCH MANAGEMENT & SCORING SYSTEM

Simply the Best Way to Track, Monitor and Manage All of Your Cowboy Action Shooting Match Needs!

The Match Management & Scoring System

The Match Management & Scoring System uses MS Access as its database engine. Since the install program includes the MS Access runtime module you won't need to purchase any additional software.

If you own MS Word the Match Management & Scoring System will extract mail merges for name and address labels. You can create your own specialized match certificates and the system will merge category winners into these templates.

During annual or regional matches you can track many different criteria, such as: dinner tickets, gun cart rentals, registration input (whether your registrations come from your web site, regular mail, e-mail, etc).

The Vendor registration module includes space management and tracking of payments and sponsorship fees. This module also prints vendor badges and dinner tickets.

The Match Management & Scoring System is capable of scoring by rank points, total time or category total time just by selecting the check box you want.

You're also able to track misses, penalties and bonuses so shooter can track their progress.

Annual Support

After the first 6 months there is an annual support fee of $60.00 per year. This support fee covers all program updates, e-mail and telephone support.

Benefits

- Track misses, penalties & bonuses
- Scores are computed
- Computerized posse assignments
- Print stage score sheets
- Print individual personalized score cards
- Easy extraction to Excel
- Score by individual or by posse/stage
- Print your own certificates
- Print confirmation letters
- Print dinner tickets
- Mailing labels
- Vendor registration
- Event tracking
- Integrated mail merges with MS Word
- Much, much more

THE CAPGUN KID RIDES !!!

The 2010 Pennsylvania State Championship, My Forty Dollar Hat, The Raunchiest Gunbelt In The World, and Carolina Dutch Henry Brown's Dogs.

By The Capgun Kid, SASS #31398

Muncy Valley, PA – Grown men quake and quail at night when the moon is full and Carolina Dutch Henry's Dog Pack roams the SASS matches! It is said, in fearfully hushed, whispered tones, the dogs can bring down a horse and, indeed, even grind a mounted match to a halt by depleting the equines before dawn ...

They stand about thirteen hands and have blazing red eyes and ...

OMG, I don't want to talk about it anymore, I may never sleep in peace again ...

On the other hand, I find some folks are so cynical—they don't believe me, so look at the photo of Dutch and his dreadful beasts ... Now then, are you gonna believe me or your lyin' eyes?

A forty-dollar hat and the most beautiful rig in the world.

It's gotten to the point for the Pennsylvania State Championship Match at North Mountain where one of the reasons I go is to see the vendors. That's not to say the club spirit and the reliable, consistent quality of the match aren't important. Nor can a body overlook the thoughtfulness that goes into special events like their SASS Scholarship charity tent and Friday Night Supper. They may even be worth the trip in and of themselves. In fact, though, some of my favorite pieces of gear and clothing have come through the camaraderie you experience when you see those vendors year after year. Bob Enck's Gun Barn has sponsored this match repeatedly, and people like T-Star Leather and The Blanket Brigade are something to look forward to over the winter whilst dropping loose change into a mug so's to have enough cash to burn a hole in your pocket in the spring. Gotta have one of Black Hills Barb's shirts.

When you drive up the mountain, through the forest and into the parking area for El Posse Grande's event every year, you are always struck by the scenery and the wooded range area. This year Pastor Hanson Steel's, SASS #76916, crew based the match on the movie "Blazing Saddles." It was Pastor Hanson Steel's first state match as match director, but you'd never know it. It is easy to overlook the thoughtfulness of the stage writers and match theme planners when leafing through your handbook, but invariably when you latch onto a theme like Mel Brooks' movie, "Blazing Saddles," you find a lot of banter takes place in the posse once people recall all the scenes from this and other movies. Somebody had to set that atmosphere up in the first place.

Throw in the props that were set up, such as the toll gate from the end of the movie and the candy-gram, on top of the already fixed building fronts, forts, and elevated lynching platform, and the event gets a little better from the get-go. The geographic spread of the posse leaders, such as Rowdy Bill, SASS #9628, and Tom Payne, SASS #13115, from New York and Jug Browning, SASS #22356, from Maryland, lend credibility to the thoughtfulness of the match.

Long about the previous February, those of us registering started getting notices the club was going to stage a charity event for the SASS Scholarship whereby you could bring in unwanted gear and clothing, post them in a tent, and split the take with the scholarship. I had no idea what a draw this was when my pard, Gray Squirrel, SASS

#46705, and I pulled into the event, but would certainly like to see more clubs do it. I had some boots, a hat or two, several shirts, and some leatherwork to offer, and I dropped the prices through the floor to get rid of them. I wasn't there ten minutes when I spotted a hat I'd been looking for for about a year. Yup, that SASS Scholarship Tent had my attention ... three or four visits were called for because of a very hot wad of cash burning holes in my pocket. Between what I bought and what I sold, I hope the kid who gets this scholarship can straighten out the economy, cure a disease, and bring back the B-Western ... or some such.

Anyway. Gray Squirrel and I had become roomies and roadies for about two years prior to and for this event, and we watch bust caps. Now, I don't shoot for speed, but every so often I like to set my sights on shooting a clean match. I wanna know that, were I in a movie, I could shoot the gun out of the bad guy's hand or settle the tion, shooting tactics, and a bit of motivational speaking about how a body should focus when on the stage. That gets my attention. When you get a match like this one, where you look forward to it, it is because your anticipation is up due to the match quality. Happens every year.

As his truck pulled up the dirt and gravel road leading into the range where El Posse Grande does their work, we were like a couple of kids peering out the windshield to see what was up. I also began to wonder what would go wrong for me this weekend. Recall I once wrote I felt jinxed in this particular match because every year I'd show up and have guns breaking, ammo cases left home, and a set of gongs that suckered me into shooting a "P" because if I did so they would chime like a clock. For such a great match as this one, I always disassemble as if I had bad medicine every time I come here.

Well, it didn't take long unpacking to figure out this year's hex ... I brought the wrong rig! The one I made for this event was still in my shop because the phone rang when I was supposed to pack it, and I forgot ... what a drag it is getting old! The one I brought was, in fact, sitting forgotten in the bottom of my carpenter's bag. It had to be one of the raunchiest pieces of leather I ever made; an experiment from the get-go. If I remember rightly, part of the reason to even build the thing in the first place was out of spite because John Wayne wore such atrocious gun leather in "Hondo," "Rio Bravo," and "El Dorado." I had to choose between not watching those movies and building a spite-rig. No brainer. So now I go piling into the match with a handicap wondering what else will go wrong with my North Mountain Jinx.

Not one piece of leather put into it was anything other than a scrap, and the silver I put on it was bought for so low a price at a flea market I had to go to confession because I felt like I cheated the guy. I had extended and retracted the buckle because of weight gain and loss, and I used it as a test bed to figure how fast I could make a rig from start to finish. None of the edges were bur-nished, and the hide I made it out of was purchased at a blackpowder rendezvous over fifteen years ago. I think it was a split buffalo remnant. Never heard of such, but I bought it anyway. Sister Mary Vicious!!! I couldn't believe I left my other choice rig home and would have to shoot this weekend with this piece!

The 2010 Pennsylvania State Championship . . .

My posse, Posse Four, was most of the boys and girls from Western Pennsylvania ... all of us Steeler Fans. I had been shooting with Dirty Dale, SASS #61545, Gemstone Janet, SASS #74014, Sodbuster Burt, SASS #14411, and his lovely wife, Ellie Sodbuster, SASS #30273, Coon Richardson, SASS #71203, Squirrel, and my dearest friends Dirt Slider, SASS #65857, and Dusty Lady, SASS #79407, since coming to Pennsylvania five years ago. We did have several folks attached to us we had not met before, not the least of which were a couple of juniors known as Halfcock Brett, SASS #88434, and Quick Whit Bigguns, SASS #80157. Based on the example of their willingness to work, their safety practices, and their shooting, it's reassuring SASS has so much to offer to our youth. It was also an attention getter when these young men showed us how to do it, and that is just another thing that happens naturally when a match is well planned and thought out.

We started on the fourth stage and shot six stages on Saturday. As always seems to be the case when El Posse Grande turns its pens loose, the stages involved the right amount of movement without being chaotic. You shot an interesting variance sequences and target orders that challenged without becoming algebraic fractal patterns on a base three mathematical universe. Lastly, there was the sheer fun of shooting with pardes who knew what they were doing and shared the load of work. Evidently Lostrider Calhoun, SASS #50731, and Timberland Renegade, SASS #58071, were a great team designing stages and putting the mechanics together.

I spent the day shooting clean without having a gun fail, nor having to use somebody else's ammo, nor being lured into a procedural. Hmm ... what was wrong with that picture? Maybe my rig wasn't so raunchy after all!

I bought a shirt from Stitches in Time/Black Hills Barb, SASS #34171, picked up a '92 from Enck's Gun Barn/Barnmaster, SASS #11943, and got my hundred dollar plus John Wayne hat from the scholarship consignment tent for only forty dollars cash money. Remember the chapeau John Wayne eventually beat the crap out of in "Hondo" and "Rio Bravo?" Well, there it was, and I could not pass up. Once I got the hat home and took a steam iron to the brim to get it the way I wanted, I have worn it all season and cannot put it on without thinking of what a great idea the exchange was. On the other hand, somebody was walking around in my old vest, my Boss of The Plains Hat, and a pair of Frye Boots I put up for sale. My raunchy rig worked flawlessly for me, and I surprised even myself with it.

The rest of the vendors present were Russ the Carver, Boomer's Bags, Shooter Safety Products, PT Litewell Photography, Sweetwater Mercantile, Frederick's of Deadwood, Mustang Nuts, and M C Walker Tintypes. Well worth a lunchtime stroll.

They run a good banquet at North Mountain on Saturday. This year several of my pardes decided to hang around for a bring-your-portion dinner Friday. They showed "Blazing Saddles," and there was a lot of laughing and good times going on. Wish I could do this during the week and work on weekends.

Sunday shooting started us at the toll gate from one of the last scenes in the film. You had to remember to shoot outside-outside-inside on the two sets of three targets. Somehow I made it through the rest of the day without a procedural or a miss. We finished on the second stage where you had to remember you'd engage two of the shotgun targets, move, engage everything else, and then get the two remaining shotgun targets. Not exactly rocket science, but it occurred to me I was shooting the match clean. That got a hold of me, and I got dopey nervous, waiting for the jinx to pounce off a tree limb and ruin my day. Maybe I'd forget the second set of shotgun targets or instinctively go for it out of order. Yup ... a "P" ... that'd be it ... that'd be how I'd goof it up.

When I did everything right, finishing with a clean match, it occurred to me I could not wait to come back to this ever so hospitable club next year. It also occurred to me, when I shot clean at Heluva Ruckus in '05, I was wearing this rig. As a matter of fact, every time I have ever shot clean, I was wearing this rig. Inasmuch as it did not get eaten by Carolina Dutch Henry's dog pack as they roamed in the pale moonlight, maybe I'd have to wear it all the time. Don't look so raunchy after all.

You might wanna consider shooting here next Memorial Day Weekend. It really is worth every mile of the trip.

Don't shoot yore eye out, kid. 🤠

SHOOTOUT AT OLD MAGDALENA

The SASS New Mexico State Championship 2010

By Annabelle Peacock, SASS #50114

This match was literally started with a BOOM! Chickasha Smith's cannon is a tradition for this match, and it never fails to shock everyone within earshot when it sends its load down range!

Old Magdalena, New Mexico Territory – The sun shone brightly, the wind stayed down, good stages, and everybody had fun with their guns ... all weekend long!!!

We had just pulled into Old Magdalena and circled the 'wagons,' feeling tired from being on the dusty trail all day. After setting up camp, we went into town to see how the old town fared. We met up with Major Lee Scholes and his lovely bride, Lori. What a wonderful pair of people they are. They graciously allow us to play our games on their ranch every year.

Well, Old Magdalena looked great! Those Trail Drivers work very hard, and they had everything under control. Shade structures lined the shooting range, allowing the shooters respite from the hot sun. All the weeds and bushes were cut down and the new steel was freshly painted and shiny in the sunlight. The cantina shack was up and furnished with tables ready to hold the banquet of barbecue meats and all the trimmings of a Cowboy Dinner planned for Saturday night. At the Registration Tent, we meet many friends we hadn't seen in a year!

Bright and early on Thursday, Half-a-Hand Henri, SASS #9624, was conducting her 'Finishing School' down by the General Store. There was a practice bay available for any shooters that were eager to get rid of those jitters and misses before the main event!!

Friday, September 17, started out with Long Range Events early in the morning and a four-stage Wild Bunch Match in the early afternoon, finishing with a four-stage Warm-up Match in the mid-afternoon. Everyone got to shoot just as much as they cared to. It was a full day of shooting. But, the fun did not stop there. Cowboys and Cowgirls were gathered around the campfire after dinner, seated on bales of hay, with a Sarsaparilla in hand as teams were assembled for the trivia contest called, "Are You Smarter Than a Fifth Grade Cowboy?" Half-a-Hand Henri was the emcee as she led five teams of four through the trivia questions. They battled it out, and after answering the most questions correctly, the Best of the West won the bragging rights. Go Team!

Following the main match, there was still lots of shooting! Clearing snakes from the back yard is always a dusty business out West, and it was no different in Old Magdalena!

Saturday, September 18 Old Magdalena awakened bright and early as shooters made their way to the safety meeting held at the Gallows. Just before the first shot went down range, SASS #50339, Chickasha Smith's, cannon belched out the signal for the shooting to begin. Three big posse's found their starting places, and a lot of smoke and thunder was sent down range that day!

Chickasha Smith, Knittin Kitten, SASS #50340, and all the Magdalena Trail Driver Ladies put together a fantastic feed at the barbecue that night. Very early the day before they dug a pit six feet deep, six feet long and four feet wide, and made a fire in it. When the coals were burning just right, they brought out wrapped meats (beef and pork) and a huge covered pot of beans and put it all in the pit and then buried it overnight. When

New Mexico SASS State Champions for 2010— Half-a-Hand Henri and Boggus Deal. Congratulations! Unfortunately, their reign will be short-lived ... the 2011 State Championships are planned for January 2011 in Las Cruces. It's not good to "peak too early!"

Old Magdalena was all spruced up and ready to go for the New Mexico State Championships. Notice the unusual, completely enclosed loading/unloading tables at the left in the photo ...

 they took that food out of the pit ... you could not believe how tender and juicy the meat was! Add the beans, coleslaw, and all the trimmings ... you got yourself a Cowboy Dinner!! Oh, and who could forget the freshly made sopapillas drizzled with honey? Simply delicious!

Whoa, son! Before you get out that Sarsaparilla jug ... you will be going to the Blackpowder Night Shoot!! You know how cool it is to see that fire, smoke, and sparks coming out the end of those guns at night? Ha! Now that was one full, fun day in Old Magdalena!

Sunday, September 19 dawned early with all those eager cowboys and cowgirls ready for the next six stages. More fast and fun stages were completed as the weather held true and turned out to be a beautiful day. Then it was time for the Posse Shoot where the trick was to shoot all those nasty, rubber snakes outta the yard with only your shotgun. It took a lotta dust to scare those snakes away! And then, the couples were gathering at the Hotel/Depot for the Couples Shoot, and each team had to shoot all their guns with specific help from their significant others! ... Whew! After that, it was time to settle down for the Awards Ceremony. What a great time!

As you have heard many, many times before ... Or have first hand knowledge of ... it takes a special posse of people and a lot of blood, sweat, and tears to make a cowboy shoot come off like it does in Old Magdalena. What makes a great shoot, but the people, the shooting, the eating, and the visiting? Yessiree!! A great posse of hard Grizzly Adams, SASS #3674, gets things started at the Shooters' Meeting. Safety, special rules, plans for the event, and an inspection of all the "costume categories" competitors to ensure compliance were part of the program.

Tents up and down the firing line provided much needed shade during the mid-day shooting. In years past they have also provided respite during the occasional desert thunder showers!

working, fast shooting cowboys and cowgirls make Old Magdalena shine!! Way to go! Thank you to the vendors, the sponsors, and everyone who showed up to shoot with us. See y'all next year!!

RAMPAGE

By Indiana Kid, SASS #76398

Kaysville, UT – The dictionary defines ‘Rampage’ as to rush violently or wildly about.

At a growing Cowboy Action Shooting™ club nestled in the foothills of northern Utah known as ‘Wahsatch Desperadoes,’ Rampage is defined as their annual fall shoot that is nothing short of a whole lotta fun!

This years shoot was just that. The day started out with the local Boy Scouts performing a flag ceremony with one of our own young cowgirls, Utah Star, playing the ‘Star Spangled Banner’ on her flute. Then a day full of six stages, 20 SASS recognized categories, a costume contest, and food catered Utah Star playing the National Anthem on her flute with the local Boy Scouts during the Flag Ceremony.

Captain Poh-rank— top Young Gun. Great Shooting!

by a great local BBQ joint, not to mention the weather couldn’t have been any better.

The local boy scouts also pitched in to help run the score sheets. There were door prizes, great awards, and in some of the shooting bays the great black smoke was so thick you might think the morning fog just rolled in.

Many generous sponsors donated door prizes, which shows great support of our sport and for which we are very thankful.

Overall Top Shooters—Texas Slick Willy and Celtic Ceilidh. Congratulations!

Eighty nine shooters turned up from as far away as 300 miles, and we even had 13 clean shooters! (I was not one of them, however). We also award a “Cowboy of the Year” Award for the cowboy who is always there to help out any way he can. And a “True Grit” Award for one of our own going through tough times, and surviving the trials set before them.

With six stages all in their own shooting bays, we divided into six posses, which helped keep the action moving along, so we were able to complete the shooting just in time for the vittles and award ceremony.

Wahsatch Desperadoes has optional side matches throughout the year and at “Rampage” those who have been top shooters are recognized. We even award the clean shooters from monthly shoots with the prized and beloved bar of soap!

Folks young and old all come together for the love of the Old West. Ya know, when I’m at one of these events, seeing all the cowboys and cowgirls sporting their finest period duds with the smell of leather, gunpowder, and dust, I feel like the days when the plains were filled with grazing bison, long cattle drives to the distant railheads, and the Easterner with loaded wagons heading west to homestead aren’t really so far in the past after all.

Strangers meeting for the first time and feeling completely at home with their new cowboy family all share the same cowboy spirit. So Pard, pack the saddlebags and come out and play, and hope to see you on the trail. Rampage ‘11 will be held September 24, 2011.

Smoke on the Border 2010

Wagram, NC – The Second Annual “Smoke on the Border,” the North Carolina State Blackpowder Championship, April 15 – 17, 2010, was twice as much fun for the participants this year because we shot both during the day and at night! Beautiful, beautiful weather—80’s and sunny during the day. Cool at night and a trifle breezy, which worked out fine because although there is nothing like the smell of blackpowder while watching flames shoot out of your long guns and revolvers under cover of darkness, we still need the smoke to disperse quickly too, so we can see! That is definitely a tradition we plan to continue. A giant special tip of the hat to our friend Wireman, SASS #55160, Mortensen. Shooters were welcomed by a beautiful new sign our friend, Range Raider, SASS #60365, designed and fabricated for us. It should last for years. Thank you Range Raider!

Once again, the challenging, fun stages were crafted by our own Carolina Jack, SASS #18432, Match Director and also the President of the North Carolina Cowboys. The match was held in Wagram, NC, just a little dab south of the golf capital of the world, Pinehurst, NC. Just sayin', in case any of y'all want to come out and shoot with us next year, you can play golf and shoot the same weekend. That's because clever Penelope Petticoat, SASS #45702, had the side matches on Thursday, and the main match stages on Friday and Saturday, followed by the awards ceremony, so we can get home in time to do chores on Saturday afternoon. The Cross Creek Cowboys built this range from scratch just a few years ago, and now have a state match-worthy location for us to play cowboys with our friends.

Vendors included Chuckwagon Bill, who prepared the vittles at no charge. He accepted donations for the Easy Does it Ranch, a non-profit organization that helps teens who have personally suffered with or had family members who have struggled with alcohol or drug abuse. Gunpowder Creek, with Dutch Henry and his wife Brenda, travel to matches to provide us with gear and trimmings to look good. Laying J Custom Leather (I have one of his belts myself!), J&J Designs, Beaded Renegades lovely jewelry (...and some of her earrings, too!), Ear, Inc, for new hearing protection, and Shutter Shootin' Donna, who took posse, still, and action photos—thank you all!

Door prizes (saddlebags, rifle sheath, staghorn knife, and a pair of Rod Kibler holsters) were donated by Royal Barnes. AZ Gray, SASS #5432, personally handcrafted two beautiful knives, a Damascus, and a Bowie. D&T Mercantile, Doc Clockadial and Thirsty, SASS #14949, donated a gorgeous Waltham Broadway Pocket Watch, circa 1889. Pearl and Kearney donated three pieces of handcrafted Native American art, and toothbrushes! (What can I say? I'm a dentist!) The Cross Creek Cowboys donated a Cimarron .45 Caliber model "P." Thank you for your contributions, they made the awards ceremony more fun!

Just a little note on the "Cowboy Way." Wicked Wanda won the beautiful watch from D&T Mercantile. She then turned right around and gave it to Royal Barnes because he really wanted it. That is the true cowboy spirit.

Thanks to everyone who helped make this match fun! Until next time, God Bless America and here's to the Second Amendment!! 🇺🇸

MIDWEST CLASSIC FOUR

#23910. He has taken the match from an idea to one of the best matches of the year.

On April 23rd cowboys began to gather at The World Shooting and Recreational Complex at Sparta, Illinois for a day of side matches and a Wild Bunch Match. For a few there was once again The Dooley's Shooting School where you could benefit from the expertise of the famous Dooley Gang. That evening there was a bonfire on the range with some story telling and the chance to engage in an adult beverage while meeting some of the cowboys and girls you had yet to call friends.

Saturday morning the 24th came and so did a lot more shooters in full rigs and ready to roll. The opening ceremony and shooters meeting wound up with the pledge and a whoop and a holler as ten posses went to gather at their respective starting locations and be challenged by six well planned stages. There is always a breeze at Sparta, and one of the benefits of that is when the folks from the Butcher Block fire up their grills, the wonderful aroma of rib-eye steaks, hamburgers, and polish

Buffalo, MO - The QUAIL AND UPLAND WILDLIFE FEDERATION was formed in 2009 in Buffalo, Missouri by those with agricultural roots and the realization that as wildlife goes, so does man. Their programs have a solid emphasis on local projects and on the whole picture, as opposed to one single species. In their short existence, they have expanded into nine states with more chapters coming soon. In keeping with the cowboy way of embracing new and better ideas, the Quail and Upland Wildlife Federation is now the beneficiary of the Midwest Classic. All funds raised go to help expand habitat and, therefore, maintain and increase animal populations as one of our greatest renewable resources. We still have the same man at the helm of the match in the person of Back 40, SASS Life

There you had the opportunity to bid on a hand-made knife, fine art generously donated by individuals and organizations, and many other wonderful items. The food was good, and the drinks were reasonable.

Sunday the 25th found everyone ready for four more great stages, another chance to indulge in the great food, and do some last minute shopping. After lunch, everyone gathered for presentation of awards and to say "so long" to new and old friends.

Midwest Classic #4 brought a diversity of weather and a lot of fun. I can't wait for #5. As always, I can be reached at:

BUNKHOUSE BIDNESS SASS Sweden

By Bad Penny, SASS Life #1453

Wild Bull, SASS #21850, Regulator and Territorial Governor for SASS Sweden

Cowboy Action Shooting™ is very popular in Sweden. The Swedish cowboys belong to the Swedish Western Shooters Federation, but more and more are slowly joining SASS, the unifying international organization that ensures worldwide consistency in our game. Evil Roy and Wicked Felina can be seen here (back row, center) just under the stage driver. More and more cowboys from the states are starting to make the trek overseas to play cowboy in "the Old Country."

RUGGED GEAR COWBOY ACTION SHOOTING CARTS

4-GUN SHOOTING CART
Cowboy Action shooters will appreciate the extra capacity of this shooting cart to safely hold your guns and gear!. This shooting cart carries your long guns muzzles-up and with it's unique butt-rest holder, it can hold a double barrel shotgun broke-open! The welded steel tube construction provides a strong lightweight design, weighs only 34 lbs. empty. Check out our limited edition carts online for some more unique colors.

3-GUN SHOOTING CART
Rugged Gear's 3-Gun Shooting Cart features the same easy to turn front swivel wheel in a more compact and lighter (31 lbs.) shooting cart. There's room for up to 17 boxes of shotgun shells along with upper and lower storage pouches, empty shell bag, towel, drink holders and dual parking brakes! Available in a variety of colors. There's even a Deluxe model with leather trim! See the Rugged Gear website for current shooting cart package deals!

WARNING: Never place a loaded gun in a shooting cart

Monthly matches from May to October with an occasional very cold shoot in the nasty months of November to March.

When I asked Wild Bull, my guide to Cowboy Action Shooting in Sweden, what the name of his club was, he said, "SASS Sweden." That led to some of my questions to him not making much sense to him, which led to his answers not making much sense to me. Like where was the club (all of Sweden), how big is it (try all of Sweden), etc. Getting, in short, nowhere. If he had said Dynamite Town Marshals in Karlskoga, which is his home club, I would have leapt in the air uttering joyful war whoops. I wouldn't even have had to ask why they were called Dynamite Town Marshals. Karlskoga is Alfred Nobel's city. He's the scientist who invented dynamite and has made up for that ever since by leaving, in his last will and testament, which he signed right here in Karlskoga, the money that has endowed the most prestigious and famous prizes in all the

I could have even made veiled jokes about having team shoots where Stumpy slings sticks of dynamite at the baddies' hideout, and John Wayne shoots them out of the air blowing the place apart a la Rio Bravo—a team shoot that would surely bring the local sheriff a-running to see what it was all about.

Karlskoga is still a world-renowned center of innovation in chemistry to this day.

But, he didn't. He had a different story he wanted to tell, which worked out fine once we were on the same page. But if Wild Bull and I hadn't been mercifully separated by cyberspace, (with a budget of $0.00 everything must be done by e-mail) he would have been perfectly justified in hauling out his hogleg and putting me out of my misery. Kind man that he is, we got over it.

So let me tell you about SASS Sweden.

"I believe we gathered together all the Swedish SASS members in a club in 2007," Wild Bull tells me. The idea was to form the club so they would qualify for a Territorial Governor who could keep the faithful informed as to the goings on in SASS. Three years later—out of the estimated 250 Cowboy Action Shooting™ shooters in Sweden, who all belong to the Swedish Western Shooters Federation (SWSF)—only about 30 belong to SASS Sweden.

"I guess most Swedish Cowboy Action shooters will never go to the U.S. to shoot a match, so they just can't see the point of joining SASS and spending the extra money," opines Wild Bull. "But more Swedish shooters join SASS every year, wanting to support the organization."

And, it is these members of SASS Sweden who run the majority of the Cowboy Action Shooting™ matches in Sweden and are the keepers of The Cowboy Way and Spirit of the Game.

It's all very understandable. I can assure everyone, knowing SASS budgeting policies as well as I do—they will never bring the words "stimulus package" to mind—I can safely assure everyone the Swedish, German, French, or even Italian editions of The Cowboy Chronicle are a fair few years down the road.

Of the 250 total, Wild Bull estimates about 15 per cent of Swedish Cowboy Action Shooting™ participants are women and juniors, "which is not as many as we'd like," he adds.

"You have to be able to travel to shoot Cowboy Action in Sweden," Wild Bull continues. Sweden is slightly larger than California at

175,731 square miles in area, but with less than 9,000,000 people (almost all legal) compared to California's almost 37,000,000 ('nuff said). "There are only about 15 clubs in all of Sweden shooting Cowboy Action, and the total of Cowboy Action Shooting™ matches in a year is about the same, and the members of SASS Sweden are involved in putting on a majority of these matches."

The guns, the costumes, and the rules of the game will be familiar to cowboys traveling to matches around the world. SASS Sweden has taken the lead in promoting and encouraging "SASS rules" in Swedish cowboy matches.

Most ranges are shared by several shooting disciplines, and, Wild Bull tells me, there are several ranges that are sited in old gravel pits around the country.

A modest 10 to 12 shooters are expected at monthly matches with 80 to 90 at big matches.

Last July, though, they had the biggest match they've ever held in Sweden.

Days of Truth 2010 was held at Sweden's largest range, the 12 bay beauty in the town of Thorsby (appropriately named for Thor, the God of Thunder) which "had about 200 shooters and about half of them came from countries other than Sweden," Wild Bull boasts. It was, in fact, the European Championships. And, lo and behold, the Overall European Champion of Cowboy Action Shooting™ is a member of SASS Sweden, Ray Heartless, SASS #62762. Congratulations!

How do European Cowboy Action shooters ride the trails between Europe's many countries toting guns and ammunition?

"Most shooters use a European Gun Passport," Wild Bull explains. "This is just what it says. Your guns are listed in this document, and you show it to customs when crossing the border. You also have to bring an invitation to the match you are going to make sure everything was going to be A-OK. To make it even better, they have recently acquired a multi-year lease. So now they can get serious about development. As Winston Churchill would say, "Never, never, never give up."

True to SASS Sweden's mandate of keeping Swedish cowboys and cowgirls up to the minute with SASS match protocols, targets are big and close, the scenarios uncomplicated, and the guns the same as everywhere.

The morning of the 18th was cool and bracing, but the sun was shining bright. The Pledge to the Flag was given and a prayer was offered. Then Judge Menday Coming, SASS #65165, blessed my heart by mentioning the need for funds to build the Cowboy Memorial Chapel at Founders Ranch, New Mexico. He then proceeded to pass the hat for donations to help this noble cause.

After the opening, we set out to shoot the stages that were nicely laid out for us. Their range is in among the trees with a natural berm carved by the hand of the LORD. They have nice sized targets and some unique props. One is a mine car ride that rolls down an incline at a fair clip while the shooter tries to knock over a couple shotgun targets. I always seem to miss at least one, but someday I hope to knock 'em all down! Their long-term plans are for expanding

Cree Vicar Dave & Judge Menday Coming

While The Vicar's Wife and I wintered in Texas this year, I had an opportunity to shoot most every weekend. On Saturday December 18, 2010, the Tejas Caballeros assembled at their Cowboy Action Range on the Flat Creek Ranch located near Johnson City, Texas. They have been a Cowboy Action Club for close to 20 years. But in 2008 they suffered the problems that some clubs of today have experienced—encroaching neighbors who do not want to live near a shooting range. After looking around a bit, they found a new home in the center of the 550-acre Flat Creek Ranch. Before setting up shop, all the neighbors adjoining the ranch were surveyed, and noise levels were checked to

After the last shot of the match went down range, I moseyed over to see if they had finished counting the money collected for the Cowboy Memorial Chapel. Praise God! Even though there were only 29 shooters, the final tally was $159! It says in Proverbs 11:24-25, NIV "One man gives freely, yet gains even more; another withholds unduly, but comes to poverty. A generous man will prosper; he who refreshes others will himself be refreshed."

I would like to express my whole-hearted thanks to Judge Menday Coming and all the great cowpokes associated with the Tejas Caballeros for the generous offering. With donations like this from Cowboy Action Clubs, the Cowboy Memorial Chapel will become a reality very soon.

shoot. Obtaining a European Gun Passport is not hard," he continues. "It is issued by the police, at least in Sweden. You already have your permits for the guns, they just put 'em all in one document and charge you for doing so, of course. The ammo needed for the event goes with the guns."

This is almost exactly what Canadian Cowboy Action shooters do to shoot in the U.S. with their Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms Form 6 and an invitation to the shoot.

This brings up the subject of Swedish gun laws, and I must say nothing fascinates me more than the truly antic variety of such laws around the world.

"Swedish gun laws are pretty strict," Wild Bull admits. "No one can get a handgun permit if not capable of shooting 46 out of 50 points one handed at a bullseye target at 25 meters."

Fair enough aside from the question of how do you get good enough on a handgun to get a handgun?

"You borrow a handgun owned by the club you are joining," Wild Bull explains.

But here is the kicker, and it brings to my mind an image of bureaucrats lying awake at night dreaming up schemes to torment the very people that pay their wages and obey their laws to the letter.

"A handgun permit will expire in five years, and then you will have to shoot the requirement again to keep your handgun," explains Wild Bull.

This almost guarantees, if you live long enough, that infirmity and the passing years will rob you of your first generation Colt without the government having to even raise the subject of confiscation. Now that is diabolically clever!

Dear reader, never, NEVER vote for anyone whose election slogan is "Yes! We can," when he or she and you, too, should know damn well the message from government, any government, is almost always: "No, you can't." The only joy for those who bear the burden of power is saying "no" to someone who wants to do something.

"The rifle and shotgun laws are less strict," says Wild Bull. "And permits for these do not come with a time limit and no shooting ability must be proven—only an active membership in a gun club and/or proof of passing a hunter safety course."

"Costuming is VERY important. We cannot have as many guns as you guys, so we let the frustration out by getting or making lots of cool stuff to wear," he jokes. "A household can have a maximum of 20 points of guns. A handgun is 2 points, a long gun—rifle, or shotgun—is one point."

Do the math. It means that no

The Elder Kate (standing 5th from left), who was just inducted into the Cowboy Action Shooting™ Hall of Fame during the 2010 Las Vegas Convention, is seen here during her recent visit to Sweden. Elder Kate has been active in facilitating RO classes throughout Europe, ensuring consistency in the game we play—world wide!

family of four—not a large family by any standards—can own their own set of guns to shoot a Cowboy Action main match. Two handguns and two long guns is six "gun points." Multiply by four equals 24 and that siren wailing closer and closer is coming for you. See the delicious seductiveness of saying "no" above.

True to SASS Sweden's mandate of keeping Swedish cowboys and cowgirls up to the minute with SASS match protocols, targets are big and close, the scenarios uncomplicated, and the guns the same as everywhere—Rugers and Ubertis "with the occasional genuine Colt. Shotguns would be '97s and a lot of Husqvarner side by sides and some Stoegers, too," according to Wild Bull.

But, if you go to France where '97s are prohibited, you have to shuck out the old Husqvarna despite having a gun passport for your '97. That is if you have enough "gun points" left over for a second shotgun, of course.

And what should someone in Sweden do if they want to start participating in Cowboy Action Shooting™?

"Check the match schedule through the internet (www.swsf.se) and go visit a shoot," says Wild Bull. "You will be well taken care of."

You can't ask for more than that. ♪

THE COMING ARGUMENT

By Colonel Dan, SASS #24025, Life / Regulator

Colonel Dan,
SASS Life #24025

There's an argument that will eventually surface from progressives regarding our Constitution. It's one they've periodically whispered over the years, but has not been formally proposed by Congress—yet. It's the argument that brings their claim of a “living, breathing document” to its ultimate and logical conclusion—a new Constitution. It would go something on the order of ... “Why should 21st century America be held hostage to 18th century ideas? Why should we be dictated to by men who lived 230 years ago and could have never conceived of modern day America? Their ideas reflected circumstances of the 1700's and were tainted by their political struggle with England ... and besides, it was written by white Anglo Saxon slave owners! How could any people, living in relatively small rural 18th century communities, whose existence depended primarily on basic trade and agriculture, write a supreme law of the land that adequately applies to the challenges of the 21st century? It's impossible to conceive. We must have a new constitution that addresses our needs and circumstances. Why should we be forever tied down by the ideas of relatively primitive men who died more than 200 years ago?” That argument is inevitably coming our way my friends, so prepare yourselves. How do we respond to those who call for such action—those who are ignorant of the Constitution, its true origin, as well as American history? Here's how I would answer.

Our Constitution grew from basic principles expressed in the Declaration of Independence. The two relevant principles of that Declaration I see pertaining to the issue of obsolescence are: (1) Individual rights come from God; (2) The function of government is to secure God-given rights. Now consider the words chosen by Jefferson and upon which 56 founders placed not only their signatures but their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.”

“... endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights ...” These words were not chosen haphazardly. They were carefully and deliberately considered to express exactly what the Founders knew to be an eternal truth. Anything from the Creator is by definition of divine origin or divinely inspired. Divinely inspired values, principles, and concepts are never outdated, regardless of how man measures time. To say they are obsolete would be to say that God himself is obsolete. Is the Bible out of date? After all, scripture was written thousands of years before our Constitution and by some who were themselves slave owners! For my part, I stand resolute in saying that divinity and all it inspires and all that which is based upon its precepts is eternal.

Is the spirit of mankind eternal or does it come and go like a summer wind? Is not man's desire for freedom eternal? Is that desire not inherent: i.e., placed there by God himself? Is not God eternal and by extension his handiwork likewise eternal? Are not mankind's unalienable rights as eternal as his soul and the God who created them? Is not the written expression of those unalienable rights therefore eternal? I say they are eternal for they emanate from the eternal one.

The great philosopher John Locke was one who the Founders looked to and read extensively in their search for eternal truths. Locke addressed the eternity of divine law in this way, “Thus the law of Nature stands as an eternal rule to all men, legislators as well as others. The rules that they make for other men's actions must, as well as their own and other men's actions, be conformable to the law of Nature—i.e. to the will of God, of which that is a declaration, and the fundamental law of nature being the preservation of mankind, no human sanctions can be good or valid against it.”

If we believe the words of our Declaration and the values it espouses, you can't help but believe in the eternal nature of its concepts. Knowing that our Constitution grew from the Declaration, its fundamental concepts, principles, and values must be equally eternal. Can man's written word as expressed in the Constitution be altered? Yes, and the Founders laid out a process for that. But, can the fundamental concepts upon which those words are based be altered by man? No, they are of divine origin—from a creator acknowledged by those who wrote and signed both the Declaration and Constitution—those same men who believed in it so strongly they pledged everything life held dear for them to its implementation and defense. They knew such concepts were the inspired work of our Creator, and that no such elevated thought and eternal truths could come from man alone. Could man have physically written these documents? Yes, and he did. Could man have written the words found in the Bible? Yes, and he did. But who authored the underlying concepts? It wasn't man; it was the Creator—the same Creator acknowledged by those who were inspired by Him to pen the manuscript.

As our Constitution is based on the divine concepts stated in the Declaration concerning the freedom of mankind, its principles are by extension eternal and can never and will never become obsolete. J. David Gowdy of the Institute for American Liberty supports this view in writing; “First, we must understand that liberty is based upon fundamental principles and not philosophies or policies. Principles, which are based on truth, are constant and timeless; philosophies and policies are variable and changing and are based upon theories, circumstances, and opinion.”

Where's all this lead? A suggestion is being floated to convene a constitutional convention for the purpose of adopting a 28th Amendment that states “Congress shall make no law that applies to the citizens of the United States that does not apply equally to the Senators and/or Representatives ...” Although possibly a worthy addition to the Constitution, I see this as baiting America into a constitutional convention when adding amendments requires no such convention. Article V of our Constitution states that proposed amendments need only 2/3 vote by both houses of Congress and ratification by 3/4 of the states. We must avoid formal conventions because if we ever allow it, the door would be wide open for the entire document to change, even so far as a complete re-writing! Do you really want politicians putting a partisan twist on their version of a new constitution? Not I. In fact, as stated in the second principle above, it's the incontestable obligation of government to secure our God-given rights, not be the source of their destruction. Therefore, vigorously fight such suggestions, for if our Founders saw fit to pledge their lives, fortunes, and sacred honor to implement a constitution based on a divinely inspired concept, can we do less to preserve it? Just the view from my saddle ...
