WE REMEMBER AUDIE

The 2012 SASS Southeast Regional COWBOY ACTION CHAMPIONSHIP

MURPHY

Ridgeville, SC – The Gunfight at Givhans Ferry was all about Winners! The 2012 SASS Southeast Regional Cowboy Action Championship was held during Veteran's Day weekend, a time when all Americans remember and recognize those who are currently serving or have served in our Armed Forces.

This year our match theme was Audie Murphy, a great combat veteran who after WWII made many Western movies. Audie Murphy enlisted in the U.S. Army when he was 18, and was recognized as the most decorated Soldier of World War II. Mr. Murphy was a winner; just as all 213 participants of the Gunfight at Givhan's Ferry were. He EARNED IT! Winning is defined in the Webster Illustrated Contemporary Dictionary as "to gain a victory in a contest, by effort or persistence, to be successful." This has nothing to do with luck!

Each and every shooter was treated to a full array of side matches, a Wild Bunch™ match, and a Blackpowder match on Thursday. Participants had two opportunities to win a side match. Awards were given to both those who had the top score the first time up or by having the best time throughout the day. The Blackpowder folks shot in the morning, and they quickly filled the air with lots of smoke and sound! No one on the range could be unaware of Isom Dart when he let loose with his 10 gauge double. It sounded like field artillery and had about as much smoke as well! The Wild Bunch™ folks all went "wild" in the afternoon and had a great time shooting their new-fangled guns; many were dressed for the turn of the century as well. The Wild Bunch™ match was held in strict accordance with the Wild Bunch™ rules.

The main match started Friday morning bright and early, and everyone was soon in full swing,

While the match champions are determined during the main match, the shoot-offs are arguably the most exciting. The top shooters have an opportunity to show their "stuff" in front of a "hootin' and hollarin'" crowd of seasoned SASS competitors! The Buckaroo Shoot-off between Jessie Mae Mucho and Dirty Dead Eye Cotton was fought down to the last shotgun shell!

shooting five stages that day and five more on Saturday. The weather cooperated. It was a bit cool in the morning, but was sunny and pleasant in the afternoon.

All the stages were based on seven of the many movies starring Audie Murphy. A good number of not yet well-known performers were seen in these B-Westerns. These included Lee Marvin, Edgar Buchanan, Joan Evans, Broderick Crawford, John Saxon, Lee Van

(A guest editorial ...)

The political elitists in Congress have now orchestrated a sinister campaign to destroy our Second Amendment rights.

Their goal is to shred parts of the Constitution and totally disarm the American people. They consider themselves our superiors, and to rule our lives without discord or opposition, they intend to confiscate every gun owned by civilians. Their imperial mind set is such that they want the people disarmed and thereby absolutely subservient to the government.

Do not be misled by what these political elitists say on TV or spout for the newspapers.

Their intent is not your safety on the streets or the protection of your children in school. They are insidious liars, full-blown hypocrites, who prey on your emotions over mass murders to further their own ends. Their purpose is a step-by-step plan that starts with the so-called "Assault Rifle" and ends with the pistol in your bureau drawer.

Hitler did it in Germany. Stalin did it in Russia. Mao did it in China. Castro did it in Cuba. And if you do your homework, you will discover that political elitists in dozens of countries around the world — even democratic countries — have successfully employed the step-by-step plan to disarm their citizens. History does not lie.

There is an old saying that has new relevance today. Liars figure but figures do not lie. The current gun control campaign is led by political demagogues and supported by naïve people who accept any lie so long as it is spoken by a silver-tongued demagogue. Following is a list of facts and figures that tell the true story of guns and crime in America. Not the propaganda you normally hear, but simply the facts.

... In the most recent FBI report (2011), there were 6,220 homicides by handguns and 323 homicides by a rifle of any type, including the so-called "Assault Rifle." Far more people drown every year than are killed by rifles. Perhaps Congress should ban swimming.

... The 2011 FBI report shows the violent crime rate has declined 48 percent in the last 20 years. Also, the most grisly violent crime — murder — has dropped 52 percent in the last 20 years. States with the ‘strongest’ gun control laws have a murder rate 2.2 times higher than states with the ‘weakest’ laws. Chicago alone, which has the strictest gun laws in the nation, had over 500 murders by firearms in 2012.

... In an exhaustive study, the National Academy of Sciences found no link could be established between restrictive gun laws and deterring violence. A study by the Centers of Disease Control & Prevention, which is an anti-gun organization, concluded there was insufficient evidence to determine the effectiveness of gun laws in preventing firearms violence.

... A study by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (a federal agency) found 57% of guns recovered from criminals and crime scenes were traced to 1½% of gun dealers. Whether it is the fault of crooked gun dealers or stupid investigators is almost immaterial. Enforcement of the 20,000 gun laws already on the books would do a great deal to further reduce firearms violence.

... By age 18, a child in America will witness 16,000 murders and 200,000 acts of violence in movies, on television, and playing murderous interactive games. Instead of denouncing Hollywood, the networks and the violent game industry, Congress demonizes lawful gun owners and gulls the public with cries for stricter gun laws. Meanwhile, our children continue to be desensitized to violence and mass murder.

... The nation’s mental health care system is a travesty. A study by the Treatment Advocacy Center found that the number of patients per capita in psychiatric hospitals has dropped to the same level as 1850. Think about that, the same level as 162 years ago! Starting in the 1960s public mental institutions were emptied, and it is now virtually impossible to obtain involuntary commitment of the mentally ill among us. Psychopaths and sociopaths walk our streets—and Congress does nothing.

... Only a handful of federal politicians, including presidents, have been assassinated in the entire history of our country. Yet, the Congressional building in Washington is protected by a veritable army of police. Even Michael Bloomberg, the mayor of New York City and an open advocate of disarming America, is ringed by five armed bodyguards at all times. Guess what? These elitists, who value their own lives so preciously, oppose the idea of armed guards in our schools. Innocent children, by their bizarre reasoning, would be too costly to safeguard. Billions to protect politicians, not a dime for our kids.

The problem is not guns. The problem is a Congress that blathers about gun control while providing armed guards for themselves and allowing the crazies to murder our children in schools. The killers at Columbine High School, Virginia Tech, and Sandy Hook Elementary were all mentally ill. So were the killers at the Tucson strip mall and the Aurora movie theater. A few decades ago, all of them would have been committed to mental institutions. But today the loonies are free to roam our streets — and kill.

Congress must focus on ways to track and treat psychos prone to violent acts. A cosmetic white-wash in the guise of more stringent gun control is not the solution. History proves that a crazed killer will always obtain access to a gun ... or a bomb ... which would be horribly worse, and is easily constructed from directions on the Internet. The solution is to devise and fund a mental health system that provides psychiatric care for those in need. Even if it means involuntary commitment by court order.

In the meantime, armed guards in vulnerable places, such as schools, would go far in halting the bloodshed. Politicians and prominent business leaders and celebrities all have bodyguards to protect them from violence. Average citizens, particularly our children, deserve no less.

Whether you are a liberal or a conservative, you have a responsibility to ensure our streets and our schools are safe. Contact your Senators and Representatives today, right now. Demand they cease the whitewash of gun control and direct their attention instead to the primary source of mass murder in our society — the mentally ill.

(El Alacran expands the discussion I highlighted last month ... finding a way to fairly and reasonably deal with those who are not mentally competent to handle firearms is the way toward meaningful efforts to stem gun violence in America ... Editor in Chief) ♪

Waddies Needed for 32nd Annual END of TRAIL

By Fancy Free, SASS Regulator #23612

By now most of you know what a Waddie is, but in case you don't, here is a bit of history.

Waddies were the extra help the big ranches hired when they needed more hands for big events such as branding, roundups, trail drives, or even fiestas. They were today's temps. Their pay was a dollar a day and found (food and a place to throw their bed roll).

Work is what Waddies do at END of TRAIL. Everything from the greeter at the main gate, parking, the Tea tent, getting water to the range, building and painting the props, putting up banners, bartending, running the gambling hall, providing security, and even taking out the trash. If it is a job that needs doing, a Waddie will "get 'er done."

However it isn't all work, we have fun, too! We get to attend all the events that take place on the ranch, and are a big part of putting on the Greatest Word Championship possible.

Some of us have been coming for over 12 years.

What do you get for being a Waddie, you ask? You will receive a dollar a day for each day worked during the match, a camping site, and a parking pass for the time you are there. Plus, you will receive your Waddie name badge, a collector's pin, a Waddie souvenir, and a chance to win a really great prize, maybe even a gun! You must be a SASS member to sign up as a Waddie.

All we ask is that you sign up for a minimum of a 5 1/2 hour shift for three days. You must work at least four hours in the morning for your breakfast and lunch tickets, and for eight hours you also receive a dinner ticket.

If this sounds like something you would like to be a part of go to: www.sassnet.com/EndofTrail and scroll down to Waddie sign up.

You must sign up before END of TRAIL so we can have your name badge made, as all participants must wear a name badge.

Come out early to help set up and/or stay an extra day to help tear down. All help is greatly appreciated! 🐾

PAT GARRETT'S HEARSE COMES HOME

By Whiskey Lil, SASS #25803

The hearse now sits proudly displayed in its new home inside the Dona Ana County Sheriff's Department in the Sheriff's Department Museum, which is open during regular hours, 8 am to 5 pm Monday through Friday (closed on weekends). The museum also has other memorabilia from Sheriff Garrett (Admission to the museum is free).

As the museum is only four miles from our house in Las Cruces, Redding Renegade and I had to make a special trip to see it. I have to say I got goose bumps seeing it—it is certainly no thing of beauty—flat black paint, no fancy decorations, and very subdued gray curtains, but the sheer size and its presence takes you back 105 years. Pat Garret was 6' 3" tall, so it needed to be large! I could picture myself in 1908 standing on the side of the dusty road and watching the team of horses slowly pulling the hearse, the family following behind, carrying "Long John" to his final resting place at the Masonic Cemetery in Las Cruces.

Thank you, Mr. Traylor, for this generous gift of Dona Ana County history! (Taken from a Sept 17, 2012 article in the Sun-News, Las Cruces, NM)

Las Cruces, NM – The wooden, antique horse-drawn hearse that carried Pat Garrett to his final resting place in 1908 is back home in Dona Ana County, New Mexico. The Women's Improvement Association owned the hearse until 1912 when it was replaced by a local mortuary motor hearse and sold to a local farmer to be used as a farm trailer. In 1935, Frank Tatsch, an antique collector in Silver City, recognized the historical significance, bought the wagon, and restored it back into a hearse. He placed it in a Pinos Altos, NM museum where it remained until the present. Unfortunately the museum was hard to find and rarely open, so there was little opportunity for the public to see the hearse.

A life long New Mexican, Cal Traylor of Las Cruces, spent the last 20 years negotiating the purchase of the hearse and finally was able to close the deal with Mr. Tatsch's son who inherited it. Traylor felt the hearse was a piece of local history and should be returned to Dona Ana County, so the public could enjoy seeing it. It took more than six men to maneuver the hearse out of the museum, down the steps, and onto a waiting trailer. Volunteers from the mounted patrol of Dona Ana County Sheriff's Office escorted the hearse on its long journey home from Grant County.

TIMELINE OF A DISASTER

The High Park Fire and River Crossing

By Miss Tabitha, SASS Life / Regulator #26972

She and her husband, Mad Mountain Mike, SASS Life / Regulator #4385, produce historic clothing and programs. She is an occasional, but accurate, shooter, and they are avid long-time supporters of SASS.)

In June of 2012, a wildfire blowtorched its way through northern Colorado, vaporizing our home and those of our neighbors, and impacting the lives of thousands. Here is our story of those first days of the High Park Fire.

Mike and I own 40 acres of mountain property in a beautiful area called Paradise Park in Bellvue, Colorado, west of Loveland. Only 36 homes and cabins are located here, many out of sight of one another. Over the years, Mike

Thursday, June 7

It is after hours, and I am working in my office, located in the main house. Mike is across the driveway in our Studio watching television. I am startled when he suddenly swings open my office door and says, "It's going to get nasty. There's a bad storm coming."

An immediate and inexplicably deep fear takes hold of me. We've had many a severe thunderstorm up here over the years, but there is something different and eerie about this one, with intense blasts of lightening accom-

I snapped this picture from our driveway of the early smoke plume, burning way too close for comfort.

10:00 AM – We receive a call from a neighbor informing us there is a fire in Paradise Park. We are alarmed to see a plume of grey-white smoke rising too close to our house, just behind the ridge. We assess the direction of the strong winds, and watch the firefighting planes already working the blaze, hoping they'll stomp it out quickly. We discuss which items to take if we have to evacuate. I am doing pretty well at staying calm and logical. In 31 years, Mike has never had to evacuate before, and while clearly tense, he does not appear overly alarmed. Not yet.

10:30 AM – I decide to pack my packing my office, the phone rings.

11:32 AM – The automated reverse 911 call is blunt – “Leave now!!” Mike launches into overdrive. We opt to pack business related items, since not only do we stand in danger of losing our home, but our way of earning a living as well. I am horrified to suddenly recall there are four Percheron horses and two mammoth donkeys in our meadow, boarded there only days before by friends who live almost an hour away in town. I urgently call them to get up here, and tell them we'll leave the front gate unlocked if we have to split.

I rush to pack my favorite Victorian outfits and other valuable costumes, and my sound system. I have a gig the next day, and have to be sure to pack all the props, not knowing if we'll be back that night or gone indefinitely. As Mike and I take the outside stairs, two at a time, he glances again at the panied by less rain than expected.

I am so disturbed, I grab the cat and a bag of cherished books and dash across the driveway to the Studio to wait out the storm. I can't explain it, but I feel something bad could happen. Together Mike and I watch the storm until it passes. I am still uneasy when it is over. There is no way I could know one direct lightning strike is smoldering less than a mile from our home.

office, just in case. Mike puts all the guns in the entryway and pulls up the van. I gather the cat, the family photos, the computer and external hard drive, my favorite jewelry, my dance music and books, and whichever files I deem most critical, always keeping in mind I may need room in the vehicle for more important items as I make my selections. I realize now how addled I was in this process. Shortly after I finish building smoke cloud, now black, and informs me I've got two minutes to get together an overnight bag. I shove a few armloads of clothing into a small suitcase, and as Mike runs it to the van, I quickly stuff a few personal essentials into another travel bag. Just then, the firestorm bursts upon a neighbor's summer cabin just out of sight over the top of the ridge, and something explodes. Mike sees the smoke cloud turn blackest black with fire-orange undertones. It's the final straw for him.

It was estimated the fire hit our house at 2700 degrees, and the metal roof warped and twisted upon the remains of our home.

looking for a reported plume of smoke. We grab our binoculars and drive out to join in the search. Spotting nothing, we turn toward home and meet Jim on the way. He and his fellow firefighters were also unable to find anything. We comment on how everyone is jumpy this drought-filled summer, and part company.

It is another warm, windy, dry day with spotless blue skies. We are preparing to leave to attend a historic festival in a neighboring town, but we haven't left yet. Thank God.

Tuesday morning, June 12. The fire has exploded to almost 37,000 acres. This photo, taken by a Channel 7 News helicopter, shows Paradise Park still on fire. The arrow shows where our house used to stand.

I was amazed to be able to identify what was left of my Redwing Screwknife, with still-legible engraving! He says he will honor its lifetime guarantee ...

Mike and I have many more dirty days ahead of us. Clearing ashes and burnt trees isn't for sissies. We thank every one of you who helped us in so many ways during this trial.

Our Cowboy Guns Could Be Next!

I know many of you have been closely following the gun debate since President Obama won re-election, but we cannot afford to allow him to push his draconian gun agenda through Congress. Clearly, Obama and his anti-gun minions have been attacking and disparaging the 2nd Amendment for years. In fact, over the past 80 years, our government has been incrementally eroding the 2nd Amendment through various legislative acts by those in power. While the focus of the anti-gun zealots is currently on “assault weapons” and high capacity magazines, the future may hold dire consequences for our Cowboy Action guns should more restrictive gun control measures be signed into law.

It is tantamount to cropping the tail of a dog one inch at a time, and each time telling the dog we are not going to take away his tail. New restrictive gun laws now being advocated by the President and nefarious members of Congress represent nothing more than political, feel good legislation. Nothing they are proposing will ever prevent another mass murder like Newtown, Aurora, or Columbine. Why would any honest, responsible gun owner trust a government that claims to support gun ownership while continuing to chip away at the peoples’ rights guaranteed by the 2nd Amendment?

Law abiding citizens possess semi-automatic rifles and pistols for many reasons, including self-defense, hunting, sporting competition, and, yes, resisting government tyranny. Most Constitutional scholars agree our founding framers wrote the 2nd Amendment with the intent of giving people the right to form militias and bear arms against a government that becomes totalitarian and abrogates the rights and freedoms granted to the people by the Constitution. It was written at a time when our young nation had just broken free from the bonds of an oppressive monarchy. Government today is no less inclined to abuse its power than it was then. This is not paranoia—it’s an evolution of growing distrust. It’s a concept validated by a world history riddled with examples where gun confiscation led to people becoming enslaved or worse.

Those who oppose the 2nd Amendment use the lame argument it was written in an era of muskets and is out of touch with modern day precepts. Yes, we did not have machine guns, bazookas, and nukes back then, but no one today can legally possess these weapons except the military and government agencies. As a result, the 2nd Amendment has been well regulated despite the denial by anti-gunners who want to regulate guns out of existence.

Sadly, in the wake of the Newtown shooting spree, Obama and his supporters have sought to capitalize on the emotions of naive people and force their gun ban agenda on lawful, responsible citizens. Our American culture and system of government have always been unable to control evil persons and criminals who choose to ignore laws. Anyone with a modicum of common sense knows more laws will not change this.

Gun banners seem oblivious to the fact the previous assault weapons ban allowed to expire during the Bush administration had zero effect on murders and violent crime in America when it was law. In fact, the FBI has reported that murder and violent crime went down long after the ban expired and is continuing to decline even though gun ownership has risen significantly. Gun banners also ignore the fact all the recent mass murders occurred in “gun free zones.” Gun free zones simply make people more vulnerable to attack since conceal carry is not allowed.

People who favor more gun con-

A Fundamentally Changed America Response

You know, Colonel Dan, shortly after the election I wrote an email to a friend that mirrored a lot of the thoughts in your editorial, "A Fundamentally Changed America." I, too, was stunned as the results of the election were made known. Then I was listening to Rush, and he made the statement about "You can't beat Santa Claus," and that Obama and the Dems represented Santa Claus, giving out all sorts of "free" stuff, and how half the population has become so dependent on the government they voted for the "freebies" to continue ... they were no longer interested in working hard and achieving, they had grown used to being able to sit at home and collect checks and "perks" from the government ... why work when it's offered "free." It's truly a sad situation, and I'm honestly not sure if it can be corrected. My fear is that we've gone too far to change back ... it would be a gigantic undertaking and would require the support of a majority of the population, but with the majority getting more and more comfortable taking handouts, I don't know if it can happen.

I'm 72 so I grew up in the 40s and 50s and looking back it's really sad to see what this country has become. I don't see how we can have a limited government anymore ... it has grown so big and has taken on so much far-reaching power I don't think it can be significantly trimmed back. So many powers originally intended for the states have been transferred to Washington, and the states have become so used to this arrangement, how do you change that back? Theoretically it could be done, I suppose, but it would have to be done slowly, a little at a time, and people would have to understand and be willing to accept the difficulties ... it could take a generation or two and I don't see today's people being that patient. So, while I keep hoping, realistically I don't see it happening in my lifetime. The liberals keep pushing God farther away... He's being slowly squeezed out of our schools, out of some of our workplaces, and conservatives don't seem to be able to stop it. As a kid we were taught to say our prayers every night, so say a blessing at each meal, and this was not only allowed in school, but was encouraged. Now, we don't seem to have time for God anymore and then we wonder why things are the way they are! Anyway, I just wanted to comment, I guess. I enjoy your articles, so keep 'em coming!

Saddletramp Joe, thank you for that most heartfelt note and your kind words. You're on target in my view, and I remember the same America as you. If we don't take a coordinated stand now, we will lose more than anyone may realize. We can do it, but it will require a combined effort

Gun Control

I always read Colonel Dan's column in The Cowboy Chronicle, and on rare occasions I write to encourage him to keep at it. I wanted to express my particular satisfaction upon reading "From the Editor" in the February 2013 issue, where Tex writes that "SASS is joining with ... other organizations ..." because none of us can preserve our enumerated rights unless we speak with one voice. Thomas Paine is quoted as the source of "If we do not hang together, we shall surely hang separately." This is true for us today.

I imagine there could be those in SASS who are content with "playing cowboy" at whatever level "the authorities" might allow, but I have doubts. Even in Europe, SASS members fight interminable bureaucracy to acquire and load their firearms. A certain overcompensated temporary federal employee refers to "our shooting traditions" and SASS certainly celebrates those traditions, but even the most superficial awareness includes the understanding that they began with citizen militias using personal, military-grade weapons against their tyrannical government.

The United States of America was always intended to be explicitly different from the other countries to which she is often compared by those whose allegiance clearly lies elsewhere. Some of those deliberately misrepresent the "militia clause" of The Second Amendment and particularly the "well regulated" bit. The very nature of how a SASS posse works with a group of volunteers bearing personal firearms regularly practicing safe handling, procedural compliance, marksmanship, and cooperation as a unit fits the 18th century definition of a well-regulated militia extremely well ... except for the absence of modern firearms, which I suspect many of the members handle proficiently.

NRA calls The Second Amendment "America's First Freedom" because The Bill of Rights can ultimately be defended and preserved only by the right to keep and bear arms if all other means should fail. We must take action now by peaceful means to ensure our elected representatives and officials clearly understand our enumerated rights are not theirs to take. We have "compromised" too much already and given up too much already. If this is not the point of no return, then we are already beyond it.

Bob Munden Remembered

It is with a heavy heart that I write this. In 2004 I attended END of TRAIL, the last one in California. Thanks to my pardner, Just Bill, I went as a Conventioneer. As I was walking around heeled among all the cowboy candy stores, I happened upon this table with all models of SAAs. As I was standing there eyeballing them, this cowboy came up and said I could pick them up. That cowboy was Bob Munden. I fell in love with the action jobs on the guns. I ended up leaving my guns with him. Those days of END of TRAIL the temperature was over 100 degrees. Due to the heat, I was starting to have bad feelings. The next thing I knew Becky Munden was guiding me into their RV and turning the air on. While I was cooling off, she got me a cold drink. I knew then I had two new friends I will never forget. I will miss Bob very much and my condolences go to Becky and her family.

Why Do We Have A Political Column?

As always, upon receiving my Cowboy Chronicle this month, I sat down and read it cover to cover. I enjoyed the articles on Old West history, the latest guns and gear, and what's happening around the country in our sport. However, I must say I was disturbed by Col. Dan's latest article on the "Political" page. I don't understand why a national newsletter covering Cowboy Action Shooting™ has to have the political opinion of one individual, or for that matter, any individual, in its pages. Whether I agree or disagree with the opinions stated, I question even having a "Political" section for two reasons. First, ours is a fantasy sport where we can escape in period costumes to another era and have fun with guns. We are constantly bombarded by the 24/7 media in our "other life" with political opinions and the latest "crisis-of-the-day." Can't we get away from it at least for a little while? Secondly, there are many individuals out there who enjoy the shooting sports who may not share Col. Dan's opinion as stated in our January newsletter.

Would they feel welcome? Let's keep our sport fun and growing.

Capt. Action, SASS #70709

I receive notes like this from time to time. To be sure, the vast majority of our members are a bit more savvy and concerned for our ability to play Cowboy Action in the years ahead. The Cowboy Chronicle went for some 25 years with the luxury of not having to deal with day-to-day American politics ... but, sadly, those days are long gone. Yes, we play a fantasy game. And, yes, it's a fantasy to believe your ability to own and play with your guns is not under attack. If one wants to ignore the furor, one can ... but many of us are busy writing our representatives to let them know we don't agree with the executive orders and proposed legislation that will severely curtail our ability to own and use the firearms we love. Yes, Cowboy guns are not the current target. But they will be if the current attempts to ban certain firearms and magazines are successful. Have YOU communicated with your representatives? ... Letter to the President ...

We, the elected sheriffs of Utah, like so many of our fellow Americans, are literally heartbroken for the loved ones on the murdered victims in Connecticut. As Utahans, we are not strangers to this kind of carnage—one of the last being the 2007 Trolley Square murders wherein nine innocents were gunned down—five losing their lives.

We also recognize the scores of other recent massacres, which have decimated countless honorable lives. As Americans, we value the sanctity of life. Furthermore, similar to our inspired Founders, we acknowledge our subservience to a higher power.

With the number of mass shootings America has endured, it is easy to demonize firearms; it is also foolish and prejudicial. Firearms are nothing more than instruments, valuable and potentially dangerous, but instruments nonetheless. Malevolent souls, like criminals who commit mass murders, will always exploit valuable instruments in the pursuit of evil. As professional peace officers, if we understand nothing else, we understand this: lawful violence must sometimes be employed to deter and stop criminal violence. Consequently, the citizenry must continue its ability to keep and bear arms, including arms that subsequently protect them from all types of illegality.

As your administration and Congress continue to grapple with the complex issue of firearm regulations, we pray the Almighty will guide the People's Representatives collectively. For that reason, it is imperative this discussion be had in Congress, not silenced unilaterally by executive orders. As you deliberate, please remember the Founders of this great nation created the Constitution and its accompanying Bill of Rights in an effort to protect citizens from all forms of tyrannical subjugation.

We respect the Office of the President of the United States of America. But, make no mistake, as the duly-elected sheriffs of our respective counties, we will enforce the rights guaranteed to our citizens by the Constitution. No federal official will be permitted to descend upon our constituents and take from them what the Bill of Rights—in particular Amendment II—has given them. We, like you, swore a solemn oath to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, and we are prepared to trade our lives for the preservation of its traditional interpretation

Colonel, congratulations on your new position. I wish you success for all our sakes.

SASS could be reduced to nothing more than a costume contest subject to eradication for celebrating a violent, intolerant era if we don't combine forces with like-minded others to preserve, protect, and defend a constitutional republic unique in all of time and geography.

If "progressives" want to live in Amsterdam, we can probably

E CLAMPUS VITUS: HISTORICAL DRINKING SOCIETY

OR Drinking Historical Society

The debate continues ...

By Eamon Chute, SASS #81272

As with all “secret” societies, the brotherhood of the Ancient and Honorable Order of E Clampus Vitus is shrouded in mystery. The name itself is debated, is it Clampus, Clampus, Clampusis? And are we a “Historical Drinking Society,” or a Drinking Historical Society?” I am a native Californian, and from the time I was in grade school I’ve heard of E Clampus Vitus, the Clampers for short, but never really knew what they were. But now as a brother in the ancient order, I have been enlightened! And I do prefer to use the original (though often debated) spelling of Clampus. But how did it all begin ...

Ephraim Bee lived in Lewisport, Virginia. He had a penchant for practical jokes, and loved to tell tall tales. He was a blacksmith and innkeeper, and his Inn was known as “The Bee Hive,” presumably because he graced the world with no less than 17 children. Lewisport no longer exists, but was originally located across the river from present day West Union, Doddridge County, West Virginia.

Doddridge County itself was formed in 1845 (or thereabouts) following a heated contest for which town would be named the county seat ... Lewisport or West Union. Bee favored Lewisport, and a Captain Nathan Davis, together with his son-in-law Preston Randolph, supported West Union. It was a bitter fight made all the worse by the fact Captain Davis, as a Justice of the Peace in 1831, rendered a judgment in a civil suit in favor of his son-in-law against Bee. All three men were also members of the Middle Island Seventh Day Church and the acrimony during the civil case resulted in the removal of Bee from his position as Clerk at the church. In the end, West Union was chosen as the county seat. Bee determined revenge was called for!

Bee conceived a devilish plan that would not only raise himself up in the eyes of his community, but would also lampoon Captain Davis and the “secret societies” the “good” Captain belonged to. The Captain was a Mason after all ... and Bee had been blackballed by the Captain.

It also happened that in 1845, Caleb Cushing, the US Ambassador to China, returned to the United States. Upon Cushing’s return, Bee began spreading stories, and placing several key newspaper articles, announcing that Cushing was charged by the Celestial Emperor of China with finding the “most honest man in America” to divulge the secrets of an ancient brotherhood founded by St. Vitus and originally entrusted to the great Emperor of China. When all was said and done, it just so happened Ephraim Bee was THE most honest man in the country! Well ... at least according to the newspapers. Bee was inundated with requests from men as far away as Pennsylvania and Georgia asking to be admitted to the "ancient brotherhood" and E Clampus Vitus was born!

Bee created lodges for the new order and established them throughout the East Coast. Thousands of members joined and each in their own way added to the ancient myths and legends. Members at the time were to be found in every town and village, and in every trade and occupation, with the exception of politics. Needless to say neither Captain Davis nor his son-in-law was ever invited to join the new society.

As a brother in the Ancient and Honorable Order of E Clampus Vitus (ECV for short) I will not divulge the secrets of the solemn and sacred initiation ceremony, the special handshakes, or the intricate and ancient rituals we practice. No, that I am not permitted to do. What I can share is that we are a kind and benevolent order originally dedicated to the "Care and Maintenance of Widows and Orphans." Especially the young widows!

With the discovery of gold in California in 1849, a mass migration of those seeking their fortunes moved westward. Clampers were well represented, and they established lodges in many of the mining camps and newly formed towns in and around the gold fields. Very few women folk were around to temper the wildness of these encampments, and Clampers soon gained a reputation for drinking, having fun, drinking, playing practical jokes on each other, and drinking. It's not surprising then that the annual Clamper Christmas Ball in these towns was the most coveted event in which to be invited. Today many Clamper chapters host the Eliza W. Farnham Art, Literary, and Garden Circle Annual Dinner Dance in honor of our own "widows." Western period costume is highly encouraged.

In reality, Clampers of old made sure if any brother were injured, or was to find himself in dire need, he'd be taken care of. If he happened to meet a fatal end, his brother Clampers raised money to assist his widow and any orphans left at home. For those Clampers lucky enough to have a wife in camp or in town, and he happened to lose his life, money would mysteriously be left at his widow's house with no one the wiser. During that time ECV was the largest benevolent organization in the American West, and the only one of it's kind tending specifically to the care and wellbeing of injured workers. Well into the 1850s, ECV lodges were found in many gold mining areas of the world, including British Columbia, Alaska, Australia, and New Zealand, and all with the same dedication to helping their brothers.

Shortly after the turn of the century (1900 that is), ECV had begun to die out. Towns became settled, cities grew, and the need for such assistance from brothers was greatly diminished. In 1932, three historians came together in San Francisco while doing research into the California gold fields: Carl Wheat, George Ezra Dane, and Leon Whitsell. These three men became intrigued by the many newspaper articles they uncovered written during the late 1800s that had references to "Clampers." They were also alarmed at all the history of California that was being lost due to the rapid modernization during the twentieth century. E Clampus Vitus was resurrected and has grown steadily to this day.

Currently there are over 40 ECV chapters throughout California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, and Idaho. Most chapters do historical research in to places of lesser-known, more esoteric and whimsical history, and erect plaques in recognition. These "plaque'ings" are usually held along with a grand Doins' accompanied by food, drink, and much revelry. Some of the newer plaques placed by ECV chapters are Geo-caching sites—sort of a modern day treasure hunt using smart phones or GPS (look it up on the inter-web using a Google search). Additionally many chapters adopt a local charity or engage in a civic project—building playgrounds, fundraising for fire departments and law enforcement, highway cleanup crews, and many military charitable organizations.

Currently there are over 1000 plaques placed with several added each year. Plaques have been erected at Hotalings Whiskey Warehouse in San Francisco, CA; Railroad Pass (oldest operating casino in Nevada) in Henderson, NV; Potter's Field Cemetery in Victor, CO; The birthplace of the Martini in Martinez, CA (a favorite to many Clampers!); the Red Light District in Virginia City, NV, and Monument Row dedicated to the units that trained at Bouse Camp, founded by General Patton, in Bouse, AZ. One site, www.waymarker.com, lists the locations and photographs of some 500 plaques.

Clampers are represented inside the brotherhood of SASS as well. My good friend and brother, Flying W Ramrod (ex-Noble Grand Humbug, El Viceroy Marques de Branciforte, Chapter #1797) is the leader and Clamprogenitor of the Red Shirt Posse. Clampers of old, as they are to this day, are easily recognizable by the red shirts they wear. Ramrod reports the first run of the Posse will be at Winter Range. The Posse will also be attending the Shootout at Ft. Miller in April, the Western Regionals at Chorro Valley in August, and Adobe Walls in September.

What are the requisites for being a Clamper you might ask? You must have a good sense of humor, an interest in the history of the West, an open mind, and it generally helps to have a cast iron stomach! Unlike other "secret" societies, one does not ask to join the Clampers—one is invited. An invitation is tendered only once, and of course, who of good judgment and character would turn down such an invitation? Certainly not the likes of Mark Twain, U.S. Grant, Henry VIII, George Washington, all the Caesars, Sir Francis Drake, and even Adam himself. OK, maybe the lineage on a few of those may be somewhat questionable, but Mark Twain was definitely a Clamper! It should be noted Clampers are not made, they are born. If the invitation to go Clamping is ever offered to you, I'm sure you'll do the right thing. After all, you were born weren't you?

SASS Members Return In Movie DAY OF THE GUN

By Punxsutawney Pete, SASS Life #1286

It was a reunion of sorts on May 22, 2012, in Jessup, Maryland, as SASS members from the Mid-Atlantic States came together for the second independent film production directed by Buck Swede, SASS #61056 (Wayne Shipley) under the working title of "Day of the Gun." The call went out again, and cowboys gathered at the Jessup municipal building for another opportunity to appear in a dramatic Western movie. A number of SASS members who appeared in Buck Swede's first movie, One-Eyed Horse, came back for this production, including some of the leading actors who joined SASS during its production.

This new production provided an opportunity, just like in SASS, for the extras to develop their own respective personas for the movie. Each extra would receive full name credit for the character he developed. At the casting call, Buck Cowboys gather for the casting call.

Swede announced that extras might have a chance to have featured roles if their characters could fit a needed profile. I decided my character for the movie would be Raymond Brontil, a French and Indian former Army Scout turned Indian policeman, partially as a tribute to a French ancestor Jean Brontil. When I was called, Buck Swede and I discussed the origins, mindset, and motivations for the character, Raymond Brontil.

The other extras and I were in the baseball game scene that was shot on June 16, 2012, on Director Buck Swede's farm in Jessup, MD. Through the efforts of Production Manager Ruthie Holmes, this movie strives to establish authenticity in the appearance of the actors, including the SASS members who were cast as extras. The extras had a 7:30 AM call to register and have the final check made on their appearances to make sure they would look authentic for the period. Modern eyewear, wristwatches and energized cell phones were not to be present during filming.

The weather was cooperative, as it was a bright and sunny day for the entire shoot. One challenge to the shooting of the movie was the frequent overhead flights of airplanes in and out of nearby Thurgood Marshall Baltimore-Washington International Airport. From listening to the production crew, it sounded like they had worked out a system to deal with the flight noise, eliminating the filming stoppages that occurred during the shooting of Buck Swede's prior movie, One-Eyed Horse, when planes were overhead.

The story is set in 1895 Montana, in the town of Singletree (that must be tough on the local dogs). Buck Swede's farm contained a large open field that provided the setting for the baseball field and supporting tents. The baseball game scene provides comic relief to the picture in contrast to the dark scenes shown in the film trailer. The game takes place as part of the meanor falls apart through the antics of the town's mascot, played by film star, "Gracie the Mule." One of the Aces believes the mule is laughing at him, and he starts a bench-clearing brawl that brings in all the players plus the townspeople. To provide a sense of realism, the Excelsior Aces were played by a real life vintage baseball team, the Chesapeake and Potomac BBC, part of an association of clubs who seek to maintain the legacy and spirit of baseball in the 19th century.

The production gave me an opportunity to be a living history exhibit. During the filming, I carried a period Trapdoor Springfield rifle as a prop. During the day, I gave impromptu lectures and demonstrations of the breech mechanism of the Trapdoor Springfield rifle.

Other scenes were shot at the western town set constructed at the Shipley farm in Jessup, MD. I was a background actor in the saloon scene shot on December 1, 2012. A complete saloon interior was present, with bar, piano, poker, and faro tables. Oil lamps provided basic illumination. Some classic touches for independent film production were present. Scene shooting began with a manual clapboard. A camera dolly rode on an aluminum stepladder laid across two sawhorses. High production values were the order of the day. A plan for another actor and I to "wipe the camera" (walk through the scene in front of the camera) was scrubbed when it was discovered the floorboards would have made too much noise. Buck Swede changed the scene to having us playing cards at another table and made reaction footage of each of us as the scene unfolded.

The production group anticipates a theater release for "Day of the Gun" in the summer of 2013. A preview of the movie can be seen at www.one-eyedhorse.com. Look forward to the return of your fellow SASS members on the silver screen or flat screen!

SHERIFF THOMAS

A real life Sheriff with “true grit” from my hometown of Carmi, White County, Illinois

Submitted by Shenandoah Slim, SASS #35827

You may think that Illinois was too far east and too civilized to be part of the 1870s “Wild West,” but the story that follows shows that to be wrong. Thomas I. Porter was Sheriff of White County Illinois in 1877, but our story begins 13 years earlier.

Part 1: The Crime

On March 19, 1864, Augustus Stewart was a farmer living in “easy circumstances” in southern White County, Illinois. His family consisted of his wife and four daughters ranging in ages from 11 to 17 years. About an hour before sundown on the above date a man on a small black pony came to the house, pretended to be a traveler, and asked to stay the night. Mr. Stewart welcomed him, as was the custom during that time. The family ate supper about 7 PM and then gathered around the fire in the sitting room. About 8 PM the stranger left the house for about ten minutes, returned, and sat down with a book pretending to read. In a few moments the front door was thrown open and two men carrying revolvers and with faces blackened and coats turned inside out entered the room and shouted in a loud voice “Surrender!” Mr. Stewart, sitting in the middle of the room, rose to his feet and faced the intruders. The larger of the two men moved forward and placed his pistol to the breast of Stewart and fired. The murdered man fell to the floor with his clothes on fire. Amid the agonizing screams of his wife and daughters, he was able to crawl a short distance to the back porch.

The larger of the two men then demanded that Mrs. Stewart hand over all the money in the house and threatened to kill everyone there if they did not hand over “every last cent.” While the thieves were demanding money, Mr. Stewart was calling to his family to put out the fire on his clothing, and although the daughters begged the intruders, they would not allow them to do so. The two thieves finally did allow the traveler to go out to the porch and extinguish the burning clothes. After collecting the $430 dollar life savings of the Stewart family along with Mr. Stewart’s double-barreled shotgun, the robbers left the house. A hired hand that worked for the family ran to a neighbor’s house for help, and shortly after, the traveler also left the house. Mr. Stewart was brought into the house and placed before the fireplace, where in a few minutes, he died.

The neighbors that responded to the call for help spent the night at the Stewart’s home and began tracking the black pony at first light the next morning. The trail led to a spot where two other horses were tied to a tree, and all three tracks led off in a southwesterly direction. Over the next few days the trackers spoke to several people who had seen the three men on the road, and this allowed them to eventually find the pony at the George Aiken farm in Blairsville, as well as get a good description of all three men. It was believed that John Aiken (son of George) was one of the three men. A reward was offered and John Aiken was captured near his home in Blairsville and brought back to White County. He was identified as being the larger man who shot Mr. Stewart. He was also seen with a large roll of money. John Aiken confessed and admitted he was at the home, but that he was not the one who shot Stewart. Aiken, along with the Guides brothers (the other two men involved in the robbery), were indicted, but that fall Aiken broke out of jail and escaped. The Guiles brothers were never captured and John Aiken had completely vanished.

Part 2: The Sheriff

By the year 1877, thirteen years had passed with the widow of Augustus Stewart having died and the children scattered. Many people had forgotten the incident, but not the current Sheriff of White County, Thomas I. Porter. In the spring of 1877, he had obtained information that John Aiken was in southern Colorado. Obtaining a requisition from the Governor of that state, Sheriff Porter started off entirely alone to bring the murderer to justice. He reached Denver on June 28, obtained the legal documents he needed and then traveled to Canon City, Colorado where after speaking to the Sheriff, he learned John Aiken did indeed have a cabin in the Rocky Mountains about 25 miles southeast, in a place called Babcock’s Hole, and that Aiken was known to be a dangerous man and would put up a desperate fight. Taking two men with him furnished by the Sheriff, they traveled to Greenwood (a country store and post office) about three miles from the Aiken home.

Knowing they needed a plan, they decided to represent themselves as land speculators from Chicago that had become lost and desired to be led back to Greenwood. The three men, with the storekeeper as a guide, made their way to the Aiken house about 10:00 at night. Within a mile of the house the storekeeper refused to go further, leaving the three lawmen on their own. They shortly reached Aiken's low double-log cabin, and knowing that Aiken had a large family, they decided to try to get him away from the house to make the arrest.

Sheriff Porter approached closely to the house and called until Aiken came to the door and asked what he wanted. The Sheriff told the story of being lost land speculators, and they would pay $5 to be guided back to the store at Greenwood. Aiken looked at the three men and told them to wait while he went back into the house (probably to arm himself). When he came out, he said he would guide them for $5. Aiken strode along ahead of the three lawmen totally unaware of what was really happening. When the party had gone about a mile from the cabin, Sheriff Porter, in a stern voice, ordered Aiken to halt, and when Aiken turned, he saw he was looking into the barrel of the Sheriff's revolver. Aiken was placed in shackles and taken back to Greenwood. The following day all four men returned to Cannon City and from there Sheriff Porter, entirely without assistance and shackled to his prisoner, sitting by him during the day and sleeping by him at night, made his way 1500 miles back to Carmi the county seat of White County, Illinois.

After two trials John Aiken was found guilty and sentenced to death, but the verdict was later changed to imprisonment for life and to quote the local newspaper after the trial, "He is now at the state prison in Joliet, Il ... toiling his weary hours away."

I have not been able to obtain a photograph or much other information on Sheriff Porter, but his remarkable courage and perseverance shows that this real life lawman from my hometown certainly demonstrated "true grit!"

Johnny Ringo starring Don Durant, aired on CBS from October 1, 1959 until June 30, 1960. It was loosely based on the life of the notorious gunfighter, Johnny Ringo, who tangled with the Earps and "Doc" Holliday. This fictional account had Ringo putting aside his gun fighting ways to become the sheriff of a small town. He had two deputies: Cully (Mark Goddard), and Case Thomas (Terence De Marney). Case's daughter, Laura Thomas (Karen Sharpe), was Ringo's girlfriend.

JOHNNY RINGO

The program was an early creation of Aaron Spelling for Four Star Television. Spelling created Johnny Ringo at the specific request of Dick Powell as a role for Durant. The pilot episode was shot as part of Dick Powell's Zane Grey Theater, titled Man Alone.

Johnny Ringo appeared at a time in the history of the television Western series when creators strove to make characters interesting by equipping them with "gimmick guns," the two most famous being Josh Randall's "mare's laig" from Wanted: Dead or Alive, and Lucas McCain's trick rifle from The Rifleman.

Such a gimmick gun was introduced in the second pilot. Johnny Ringo's gimmick gun was a custom built revolver called the LeMat, based on its historically authentic counterpart. The Le Mat featured an auxiliary shotgun barrel under its primary barrel. Many episodes found Ringo getting into scrapes where that final round in the shotgun barrel was the deciding factor. Aesthetically Johnny Ringo's LeMat most resembles the historical percussion model LeMat, but features a top break cartridge fed design.

Johnny Ringo scored good ratings in its Thursday competition, sometimes reaching into the Top Twenty. The program was dropped at the request of its sponsor, Johnson Wax Company, which wanted a sitcom, rather than a Western. At the time there were thirty Western series on the networks.

I'll be turning the rotary TV channel selector dial now. Stay tuned.

Yes, I'm A Real Cowboy!

By Deuces, SASS #88602

Howdy, I sometimes wonder (in my idle time and work time when people think I'm just not paying attention – ha ha) what it would be like to be a “real” cowboy! I have been dressing cowboy for some years now. I worked for Ma Bell in the 70's in Manhattan (not your typical ranch) and I would wear my 10 gallon Stetson and tie my tool pouch to my leg. I heard some snickers, but those were cancelled out by the doormen and other people of Yorkville who would call me Duke.

When I transferred to Long Island it became a little easier to dress the way I wanted. I guess Cowboys were more acceptable in the country. There a magical thing happened. I was looking for a Winchester .45 loop gun (ala The Duke). When I found one, the seller asked if I was going to use it for Cowboy Action Shooting. Hello-what? He told me about some clubs out where I lived in Westhampton. It took me a while to hook up with these cowboys (The Eastend Regulators), but when I did Yee Haw! To a man they couldn't be nicer and my wife, my friend and I joined immediately.

It's been four years since we became club members and it's only gotten better! We shoot every month and go on trips. I get a steady great feeling of being a cowboy. When the season ends (only due to the weather), we stay in touch by meetings and cowboy lunches.

Getting dressed up and playing cowboy with my pards is unmatched for me (I gave up golf – Yowza!) I still wasn't sure if this qualified me as a real cowboy? Then it happened. I was walking through the mall and over heard a little boy say to his mom, “Mom, it's a cowboy. Can I say hello?” I turned around and said, “Howdy.” The mom and little boy smiled, I melted! I looked at my friend and just said, “Yes, I'm a REAL COWBOY!”

Knot Werkin, SASS #82307

COWBOY CARPENTRY

Another Project

By Knot Werkin, SASS #82307

on to the next project ...

At this point I guess I should say this wasn't so much a project (i.e., a known plan assigned to be carried out) as it was an experiment or, truth be told, mere whimsy on my part. I don't know if I have ever seen this object in any photos in The Cowboy Chronicle or heard of one or seen one advertised by a vendor. But, picture this—you've been designated/volunteered to be scorekeeper for a time. You're holding a flimsy binder (which contains the score sheets) or just a sheaf of score sheets in one hand, pen in the other. You attempt to write down someone's score, and the binder gives way, or you drop it, or the wind picks up, or you drop the pen, or any number of other things that could go wrong do go wrong. But, what if you had a solid surface on which to place the score keeping record? Well, that's the next installment of Cowboy Carpentry.

For want of anything else to call it, the subject at hand is a scorekeeper stand. It isn't much to look at, and it looks pretty much like a music stand. My version doesn't take much wood (and, as older cowboys know, when you get wood, regardless of how much or its quality, make good use of it) and, likewise, doesn't take much time to build. The idea was to make something simple, light, and portable. The essential ingredients: a four-foot length of 2x2 (the shaft) and an eight-foot length of 1x2 (to make the holder for the binder—let's call that piece the "binder holder"). You'll also need some scrap pieces of 2x4 (for the "feet") and scrap 1x4 (which will be used with a carriage bolt and wing-nut to allow for adjusting the angle of the binder holder), something to use as a spike, exterior glue, and fasteners. I normally do not use glue on a cowboy project (especially gun carts) since the design usually evolves over time, thus making it much easier to disassemble and go on to the next iteration. On the score stands, however, you will be using relatively thin lumber, so glue plus the fasteners will ensure a lasting bond and, hopefully, a sturdier stand. I also used pressure treated lumber, but more on that follows.

As in the previous article on making things cowboy, I offer the caveat I am not a carpenter, engineer, fabricator, welder, or anything close to resembling a tradesman. The size, materials, methods, etc., can be as varied as you want. I used pressure treated lumber because it's cheap (at least for this project). Just plain ole pine would even be cheaper (but for better protection and appearance it should be stained or painted). On the other hand, once you see how simple this is to build and the nominal amount of lumber required, you might want to construct it from a nice solid piece of straight-grained hardwood (again, an older cowboy's delight) with a fine hand-rubbed French polish finish.

Lumber dimension is another factor. My idea was for a stand that would be carried from stage to stage and light enough to be held in place by a spike and unobtrusive feet. A 2x4 could also be used as the stand shaft. It doesn't add considerably to the weight, but it is a little awkward to carry (could fancy it up and add a handle). If you wanted a permanent stand at each stage, the shaft could be a 4x4 sunk in the ground. Or, if any of your cowboys are masons, you could ask them to build a brick column at each stage. That might be going too far. But, speaking of far, add wheels, eliminate the spike, and you have a rolling version that opens up many other possibilities.

Before getting started on construction, I have to throw in a word about safety, just like Norm Abram used to do before the New Yankee Workshop met its demise. My version of his advice: if you don't know what you're doing, have somebody else who knows how to do this stuff do it! Also, one quick word on economy. I started out to build just one (a prototype) but one 8' 2x2 yields two shafts. Buying an extra 1x2 for another binder holder doesn't add dramatically to the cost. I'm guessing most clubs usually have two posses (or is that possi), so there you go.

Now, let's begin construction. With the 4' shaft, drill a hole in the bottom to accommodate the diameter of whatever you use as a spike. Don't insert the spike yet. You'll need the shaft to rest on the floor while attaching the binder holder. On other end, cut the top at a 22½ degree angle (Fig. 1). This will allow for some up and down adjustment of the binder holder. By inference, this means that the height of the holder will

Before delving into a new subject, thought I'd give y'all a follow up to my previous article (Vol. 24, No. 5, May 2011) on Cowboy Carpentry that talked about loading/unloading tables. I'm happy to report the tables at the Pleasant Valley Renegades hideout in the rolling hills of Southeastern Indiana are still standing and in relatively good shape. In retrospect, I would have built the loading tables just a tad longer to more easily accommodate two shooters loading simultaneously. It's not really a problem now, but some of the fellers who wear husky sizes could use a little more room when standing side by side. On the other hand, the dimensions of your stages might dictate the maximum length allowable for individual loading/unloading tables. Having an unloading table about a loading table isn't verboten but having some separation is probably a better setup. But, be 4'. I'm 5'8" and the 4' height was comfortable from which to keep score. Unless you have a little kid keeping score (or Annie Dan or Bad Aim Girl), this height should work for most any adult. On the other end of the vertical spectrum (at least for the Renegades), though, there also looms Jose Gigante' (think redwood).

Next, construct the binder holder. Cut the 1x2 as follows: two pieces at 24 inches and three pieces at 12 inches. (Note: a standard 1-ough three-ring binder measures approximately 23x11¼ when open; thus, the holder will be a bit larger than the binder. The holder could be made smaller, of course, but this was the route I took. Adjust the holder dimensions to fit your needs.) Lay one 24" piece flat on top and at the top of the three 12" pieces (one at either end of the 24" piece and the third centered on this piece) and glue/fasten. Lay the other 24" piece at the bottom of this structure, but with the narrow side down. This forms the ledge on which the binder will rest. Glue and fasten. Figure 2 may better illustrate these directions.

Center two pieces (each 3" in length) of 1x4 on either side of the middle slat and in the middle of the slat and secure them to the slat. This will result in a slot 1½" wide on the underside of the middle slat that will be fitted over the top of the 2x2 (for those not familiar with dimensional lumber, the width of a 1x2 is 1½", the width of a 2x2 is 1½"). See Figure 3. Center the now completed binder holder in the center of the top of the shaft (the holder will be sitting on the pointy part of the shaft, but centered on the shaft). You're going to drill a hole through all three pieces to match the diameter of the bolt you are using (this part is a little tricky—trying to keep the holder on center and level and drill a straight hole at the same time. A set of clamps or a second set of hands would be useful here—Figure 4 better describes this). Once the hole is drilled, insert the carriage bolt all the way through and secure it with the wing-nut (a washer and a split washer on the wing-nut side are recommended). The binder holder can now be positioned to your liking.

Now for the feet. Check out Figures 5 and 6. I don't think specific instructions are necessary at this point since the configuration of Buffalo Bud Hardin showing proper use of the score-keeper stand. He is ably assisted by one of his lovely daughters, Cannonball McKay, as well as Colorado Two Feathers. Note the feet (the stand, not the cowboys).

the feet is your choice. You could use what's left of the 1x2s or short pieces of scrap 2x4. If you are using screws or nails to attach the feet to the shaft, make sure you don't accidentally block the hole you drilled for the spike, which, by the way, may now be inserted. Leave about 3 - 4" of spike showing. In using the score holder, most folks are probably going to spear the ground if it's soft/wet. At other times the top of the feet might be used as a platform from which to spear the ground (kinda like using a spade). Remember these scenarios when deciding how securely you want to attach the feet to the shaft. Glue and screws should be adequate. A carriage bolt or two would also work.

There are any number of optional "accessories" for your score-keeper stand, too. Drill a hole about two inches in from each corner of the holder. Thread a leather strap from top to bottom on each side and secure each end with a knot. With a binder inserted under the straps they'll act to prevent pages from being blown (Fig. 7). You could also drill several stopped holes in the front of the shaft. One could be used for an extra pen (although the pen should also be secured to the holder with string). The other holes can be used as the central station to hold the red and yellow flags for "downrange" and other situations.

I took the prototypes to a shoot recently and the immediate comments were encouraging. Some cowboys thought the Pleasant Valley Renegades Chamber Orchestra and Glee Club was having a practice after the match. Someone else said Nomore Slim, our beloved choirmaster, Match Director, and TG, would be preaching later that day. Someone else asked if we were having Cowboy Synagogue (we shoot on Saturdays).

On a more practical approach, a critical eye was taken by the ever-astute Fargo Bill who suggested a more user friendly version of the holder could be had by making the shaft adjustable to accommodate those who are height challenged in either direction (that idea has a lot of merit). And a Hey! Hey! to Bill. In actual use (I kept score for awhile), the stand held its own in soft soil (I was going to say "the stand stood steadily still in the soft soil" but that sounded too alliterative, not the language of cowboys) in November, was easy to transport, and the straps held the book/pages in place on a relatively windy day. I'll defer judgment until July on the ability of the spike to penetrate hard soil.

In the meantime, I think the Pleasant Valley Renegades will make good use of the score-keeper stand/bully pulpit/conductor's podium or whatever else you want to call it. Why, it could even be used as a prop when shooting a Lawrence Welk sweep (I just couldn't pass that up—by the way, culpability for bad puns and all can be assigned to Turkeyfoot for encouraging me to author this piece). Anyway, if you're ever in the neighborhood (the Pleasant Valley Renegades' camp sits about in the middle of a triangle formed by Indianapolis, Cincinnati, and Louisville), stop by on most any second Saturday and hear us strike up the band. There won't be as many Dings! as Bangs!, but it will still be sweet music to your ears. Yeehaw!!! 🤠

DISPATCHES FROM CAMP BAYLOR

I Wish All My Friends Were Cowboys

By Captain George Baylor, SASS Life/Regulator #24287

Jim Bowie is well known to SASS people, but just in case I'll give a little background. Jim Bowie, SASS Life member #4775, is one of the proprietors of Cowboys and Indian Store (1018 E. Chestnut Ave. Unit E, Santa Ana, CA 92701, phone 714-210-2720). His partner, T.L., SASS Life #5365, has retired and moved to St. George, Utah with his wife, Dixie Bell.

Jim has been a gunsmith since his military days in the Army and now an accomplished cowboy gunsmith to the SASS community. He is the original designer of the one-piece Marlin firing pin and the short stroke kits for the 1866 and 1873 rifles. I can attest to those accomplishments because I have a Cimarron .45 Colt '73 carbine he did a short stroke on in 2000 or so I still use in Wild Bunch matches. My Marlin .45 has had one of his one-piece firing pins since about then, too. Like most active SASS shooters, I have a collection of Cowboys and Indian parts (such as '73 extractors) in my spares kit and several of their instructional DVDs. In my case the DVDs are just to remind me I'm not a gunsmith in case I ever get delusions of adequacy.

Jim joined SASS in 1994. He was the 1999 and 2001 Senior National Champion and won the Senior World Championship title in 2000. He received the coveted SASS Regulator badge at END of TRAIL 2009.

At SASS Conventions his seminars have been standing-room-only for some time. He does a good job of sharing his gunsmithing secrets.

He is a fixture at END of TRAIL and Winter Range and other major events within range. He takes his mobile shop, a 24-foot trailer with more equipment than you would imagine in it, up to and including welding equipment. As all vendors know now, the cost of attending events when you have to take a big rig has become excessive in the land of $4-5 diesel. I'm not sure he even breaks even at these trips, much less making any profit. He spends most of the time working on guns brought to him, usually by frantic contestants. He has probably saved more matches than any other single SASS member. Most of the work is done at no charge. Just one example: this Winter Range my main match .38 Special '73 rifle went to half cock when I pulled the trigger. Fortunately no rounds had gone down range on that stage, so I was allowed a restart, using a different rifle. We finished shooting after 5:00 PM, so the next morning I found Jim in his trailer and gave him the rifle. He knew what was wrong, of course. The sear needed work. It was 9:30, and I shot at 11. I have a back-up rifle, but I like this one. He got on it immediately, and when I came back at 10:30, he was putting it back together. No charge. A few minutes later I shot my fastest stage.

Jim is always smiling and is never flustered when twenty or so cowboys are impatiently waiting to talk to him, a situation that seems to go on for hours at big matches. His wife, Sassy Lassy, SASS #4776, acts as support staff.

One day when I dropped by, he had a story to tell. Because we're both kind of busy at big matches, it took a while before we could sit down with the iPhone to record his tale.

"The story I wanted to tell you is about the man Sassy Lassy works for. His SASS alias is Pill Peddler. Sassy's health insurance got up to about six hundred dollars a month, and business was bad, so we dropped it. After about one or two years with no insurance, her leg began to bother her. She was in a bad car accident some thirty-eight years ago. Her toes were turning black with poor circulation, and she was in a lot of pain. She went to an emergency clinic, and they told her she had to go to the hospital— she needed an operation.

“The next day at work she told her boss ‘it looks like I’m going to have to go to the hospital. I don’t have insurance, so I don’t know what I’ll do.’ She only works part time, and part time employees don’t get benefits. Pill Peddler picked up the phone and told his insurance person he had an employee that is eligible for insurance now, and he wanted her covered tomorrow.” Those of you in business know how difficult this was, even if he did own the business. If you don’t know anything about insurance, this was a big deal.

“Two days later she was in the hospital for a sixty-thousand dollar operation. Sixty thousand dollars! He saved our butt! I don’t know what we would have done if he hadn’t. She only works for him about six months out of the year, but ever since then he’s paid the insurance premiums. When she’s not there, he pays for it, and when she’s there, he pays for it. This guy has been a prince for us. He’s a cowboy. I wish all my friends could be cowboys.”

Jim added that he works on Pill Peddler’s guns for free now.

Mad Dog Jack
at Winter Range 2013

Mad Dog Jack

I’ve been on the same posse with Mad Dog Jack, SASS #77862, at Winter Range for three years now, and each year I get more impressed. Mad Dog Jack has some physical problems. He has difficulty speaking, and he has difficulty walking, using a scooter to get around matches. Other posse members help him stage his long guns. He shoots Frontier Cartridge Duelist with open topped Colt clones. He isn’t fast, but he is accurate and impressive to watch. Whenever I’m grumpy or depressed over the aches and pains overtaking me and my hearing and vision losses, I think about Mad Dog Jack and the example he sets—true grace under pressure.

The Winter Range Wind Storm

Sunday morning at Winter Range we arrived to find an entire row of vendors’ tents had been blown completely loose and ended up on top of another row, and on top of a van. In the van had been Redwing and Myra Mains of Redwing Trading Company. They had been helping to try to secure the row of tents that eventually pulled loose in the middle of the night. They had tried to escape in the van when it became obvious the wind was about to win the battle with the tents, but they didn’t quite make it. The tents hit the van with some force, breaking the windshield and buckling panels. Myra said, “Are we going to die?”

Redwing replied, “Not yet.”

They managed to escape the van, but the tents weren’t removed from on top of the van until Sunday afternoon.

I bring up this story because they had a tent of their own not far away, on the side that didn’t blow away, but they were trying to help other vendors. They didn’t have to be. They could have been taking care of their own tent, and no one would have said a word. They didn’t expect anyone to notice. I noticed.

A lot of SASS folks helped the vendors who were impacted. Guns and other merchandise were scattered about the area. Colorado Mountain Hats put a notice on the Winter Range web page that anyone who ordered a hat there should contact them as their paperwork blew away. Some merchandise and guns were damaged, but all of it was sorted out and got where it belonged.

SASS is full of impressive people, and not just because some members can shoot very well. SASS is the only shooting sport I know of with an honor code, “The Cowboy Way.” As a result it attracts good people and runs off bad people, not because we tell them to leave, but because they realize this isn’t the place for them.

Being around SASS people appeals to our better angels. For example, when we see a champion shooter call a safety on himself that no one else saw, it gives us an example to follow, a standard to look up to. In an age where no good deed goes unpunished, and no evil deed goes unrewarded, it’s good to see people do the right thing because it’s the right thing.

These lessons do get passed on. Rattlesnake Wrangler, SASS #54580, who went on to win Junior Boy at Winter Range, gave himself a stage DQ at Bordertown when he discovered an empty round in a revolver at a loading table. He has already learned how champions behave in SASS by shooting with good examples.

I like being around good examples. I pretty much agree with Jim Bowie. I wish all my friends were cowboys. Hmm, come to think of it, most of them are. The rest are cowgirls.

Don't Get Bugged

1977 and experienced our share of bites each spring until I took my Dad's advice and started putting up bird houses. It says in Genesis 1:28 the Lord gave man dominion over the birds of the air, the animals that roam the earth and fish of the sea, And in Genesis 2:15, "The LORD God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it." Caring for God's creation pays off. If dog is man's best friend, then birds are man's best buddies, especially the Swallows. Swallows eat their weight in mosquitoes every day.

We started a new Cowboy Action Shooting™ club a few years ago, and the bugs were bad. So I

I don't know about you, but mosquitoes, black flies, and such really bug me. I always say Michigan in the summer is what Heaven will be like. But the first few warm weeks in the spring produces one bumper crop of bloodsucking pests. The Vicar's Wife, our three children, and I moved out into the country in started making Blue Bird houses and putting them on posts around the club. I call this "Doing the Lord's Work." Each year I put up a few more, and it has made a big difference. Blue Bird houses are designed for Bluebirds, but around here Tree Swallows will habitate close to 80% of them. Don't put the bird houses too close; they should be about three to four rods apart. Put them on some type of post around five feet high and in the open.

Some people place bird houses on the trunk of a live tree. This is not a good idea for two reasons. One, the tree grows larger each year and will push the house off, and two, most birds do not like their houses in the shade, as the sun helps incubate the eggs.

The job isn't finished when the houses are secured to the posts. Each winter they should be opened and cleaned out, taking care to be up wind and not ingesting the dust from the old nest, as there have been rare cases of people contracting ailments from this dust. After removing screws in the bottom of side, swing side out and up for access. The entrance hole for the birdhouse should be 1-1/2" in diameter. This size is just right for Bluebirds, Tree Swallows, and other songbirds of their size while keeping out undesirables. It's a good idea to place a predator guard on it also. No perch is recommended, as these only aid the rogue birds.

I make birdhouses out of 1" x 6" rough sawn cedar planed down to 3/4". But, pine will work. It takes about an eight-foot board to make one house. I use deck screws for fasteners and drill the 1-1/2 hole through the predator guard and front at the same time to assure proper alignment. You can get plans for bird houses and wood duck houses from most State Department of Natural Resources offices.

The wood is 3/4" X 5-1/2" X 8' long.
BACK is cut around 18" long Roof 8"
Front 9"

The two sides 8-3/4" (sides are 1/4" shorter then front for venting and for swing clearance).

Bottom is 4" X 5-3/4" (this allows side to swing out with ease) (grain with 5-3/4").

Predator guard is 3" wide X 5-1/2" long to match front width (grain with 5-1/2").

After the house is built, I place the guard on the front up 6-1/2" to center from bottom. The top screw

How To Extract Separated BRASS In A Rifle

Vicar, I enjoy your articles every month. I was particularly interested in a comment you made regarding broken shell extractors. I have often thought it would be a good idea to have such a tool in my bag, but did not know if such a thing existed in cowboy calibers. Apparently they do according to your recent article. Do you know where they are available? I am using brass that is many years old and fired dozens of times. My secret is not to use heavy loads and as soon as one case splits, anneal and trim them all.

I talked to Brownells, and they only have .223, .308, .30-06 extractors. They did carry Echo brand extractors several years ago, but I was told the company went out of business. I am sure there are lots of cowboys who would be interested.

John J. Valentine,

A few years back case extractors for most calibers were readily available at places that sell gun parts. It simply was placed into the chamber and the errant brass cylinder was removed by the bolt while cycling the lever.

But today, it seems they have gone the way of the dinosaurs. I have surfed the web, asked Cowboy Gunsmiths, and called suppliers to find one for .38 cal., to no avail. The only thing I know of to remove the broken brass from a chamber is what some Cowboys have told me about. I have not tried this method. But simply put, I was told to take the bolt out of the rifle, place a dam in the barrel just forward of the bad brass, heat up a special metal that has a low temperature melt, pour it into the chamber, it contracts when it sets up. After it cools, take a non-metallic (wood, brass, etc.) rod and remove the problem. I have not checked to see where to get the materials for this method or the total expense and time needed to complete this process.

I'm still looking for an extractor that works by pulling the broken brass cylinder out with the rifle bolt. If you happen to find someone who builds and/or sells them in .38 cal. or .45 cal. please let me know.
Cree Vicar Dave

(The Vicar is talking about the material used to make chamber castings. However, there's another way (or two) to get the brass out. I met a cowboy recently who reportedly had a tool that screwed into the broken brass from the breech end of the receiver and allowed you to pull the broken case back out.

Can't remember who it was ... possibly he'll respond to this letter.

Another technique I've used for years generally works ... if tried soon enough! Put a bore brush jag of the appropriate caliber on a cleaning rod and start it down the barrel from the muzzle end. Push the brush all the way through to the receiver, then begin pulling it back out the muzzle. Stop when the brush is covering the broken brass. The bristles on the bore brush are now leaning "the wrong way" and will engage the broken brass when the cleaning rod is given a sharp tap at the muzzle. Generally the brass will pop free (often on the first tap!)

At Winter Range this year I found "the" tool for extracting broken brass from a rifle. Lassiter has created a tool that loads into a rifle chamber just like a regular cartridge. Once inside, it engages the stuck broken brass, and working the lever will easily extract the wayward brass! Really slick. He sells these tiny marvels in two calibers—.38/.357 and .45. Lassiter can be contacted for price and details through the Ohio Big Irons Gun Club web page or the Guns of August Regional web page (he's a club officer)... Editor in Chief holes in guard on each side are drilled through into the front and side. Then, screws hold the guard on and act as hinges for the top of the sides. Holes are drilled through the back at the same height on each side and a screw is used for a back hinge. The guard bottom screws are just long enough to hold guard to front. Then, the entrance hole is drilled. I drill screw holes and use self-tapping deck screws. Some lumberyards, like Sequin, sell these in self-serve by the pound. I made templates for all the pieces with hole placements. This greatly reduces the layout time. If you cannot locate plans, send me an E-mail.

Always be sure to follow all safety and health rules when working on projects. I'm happy to assist you in doing the Lord's work.

Author's note:

This article was first published a few years back. Since there are so many new Cowboy Clubs now I thought it would be appropriate to republish it. It is a good idea to put up the birdhouses in the fall or at least by early spring as the birds start looking for housing here in Michigan as soon as it starts to warm up.

Chili Cowboy, SASS #59663

So, You Want A Mounted Shooting Horse?

By Chili Cowboy, SASS #59663

Founders Ranch, NM – So you want a Mounted Shooting horse. Although the old saying “you can shoot off any horse once” is not very inspiring, most horses can eventually be trained to accept the noise, smoke, and balloons. Here are a few suggestions to prepare your horse for Mounted Shooting, one of the fastest growing equine sports.

While not a professional horse trainer, I have successfully introduced five horses to Mounted Shooting. My technique is to start with groundwork in the round pen. Using a cap gun, I lead the horse around the pen while shooting the cap gun. If you can find one, the roll caps are the best (50 shots). Be mindful that you are not directly in front of the horse, so if he bolts you won't be run over. Normally a horse will not bolt towards the noise and is less likely to flee if he is following (chasing) the noise.

When the horse seems to accept the cap gun, stand next to him, holding the lead rope in one hand (careful not to loop the rope around your hand or arm) and shoot the cap gun off to the rear of the horse, then move your arm gradually forward and shoot. When he seems to be accepting the noise, begin shooting the cap gun with you in the saddle. Remain in the round pen while doing this, and keep the horse moving forward at a trot while you are shooting back over his hip. Do not shoot near his head!

Take careful notice of your horse's acceptance of the shooting, and when you feel he is relaxed with the noise, you can move your gun forward, but not past the 3 or 9 o'clock position, and do not ride with a loose rein.

Later, begin the same process with a .22 revolver. I use ramset blanks (from a hardware store). They are available in three different charges, the loudest being close to the .45 caliber in sound.

You might at this point consider using earplugs on the horse (and yourself, of course). I make my horse earplugs from foam rubber cat golf balls (PetSmart, etc) and tie together with string through the middle of the ball. If your horse is extremely ear shy, it may take awhile to slowly introduce him to earplugs.

Continue to not fire your gun past 3 or 9 o'clock. It will take a number of Mounted Shooting events in the arena before you can shoot forward towards his head.

Repeat the above process with your .45 blanks. Remember, you are now introducing a new concept—smoke.

If you belong to a club, they will often have “beginning-rider clinics” and usually start a new horse positioned between two experienced and calm horses. Normally they start with having you walk towards a gun being fired at the opposite end of the arena. They will progress to having you ride beside an experienced rider, on a calm horse, while the rider fires his gun to the side away from you.

Then, if you and your horse are ready, you can progress to you firing off your horse while an experienced rider rides beside you. Still, do not shoot forward towards your horse's head.

To introduce your horse to balloons, you can tie balloons to the bars of the round pen. Put his food near some balloons and windy days are a bonus. Later, tie balloons to the saddle horn and lunge your horse around the pen with the balloons flopping. When the balloons don't bother him much, you can begin setting balloons for a stage, which is great training. However, don't start out with a full bouquet (five) of balloons, unless you like rodeos. Begin by carrying only one balloon to set at a time until your horse gets used to them, then gradually build up to carrying several at once.

When you begin shooting at balloon targets, do not shoot at the targets until you are past them. This will keep you from shooting forward towards your horse's head. Keep your reins and stirrups shorter than you would in trail riding. You will want to be set up like a barrel racer. However, your riding technique will have to be more advanced than a barrel racer as you cannot use the saddle horn for your turns, there will be rollbacks, and you will be dividing your attention between riding and shooting throughout. Plus, you have to be mindful of one of the many (98!) varied stage patterns.

In a few rare instances where your horse can't accept the excitement, you might try a calming agent such as L-Tryptophan or Valerian Root, or in extreme cases, ACE. And don't forget the earplugs—for yourself and your horse.

Good luck, have fun, and DON'T shoot your horse. (Shooting yourself is optional! <grin>) amazement, Jerry just hit the ground and swung back into the saddle and gracefully turned the horse before the rail. I did not realize at the time that Jerry had been a stuntman, having performed on such westerns as Dead Mans Revenge, A Father for Charlie and Three Bad Men, working with great actors such as Bruce Dern and Louis Gossett, Jr.

At times, Jerry was a professional rodeo cowboy, riding bulls and saddle broncs, a wrangler, horse trainer, guide, and host to Wild West adventures held mostly in Northern California. He even met Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip in 1981 when they visited Northern California for a taste of the American West!

Jerry owns a ranch in Elverta, California (outside of Sacramento), unimaginatively named JB Ranch, where he hosts many of our SASS members for some pretty incredible experiences. He can teach you how to become a champion Mounted Shooter (I won my first World Championship Mounted Shooting Buckle after attending Expressman's Mounted Clinic earlier in the week!), or simply take you on a trail ride, but the wonderful thing about JB Ranch is that your imagination is the only restriction you will face when you visit there for your adventure.

JB Ranch offers a wide variety of horseback adventures, Old West reenactments, environmental living programs for schools, and professional motion picture services. Your cowboy adventure can be anything from horseback riding and lessons, wagon trains, and cattle drives; any of which can be combined to be a City Slicker Adventure customized to your abilities and desires. The ranch will fulfill your "dream cowboy adventure." They also offer special lessons for gymkhana and barrel racing, stunt riding, and wagon driving. Horses, livestock, buggies, wagons, and coaches are available for any type of function or motion picture work. Family parties, weddings, funerals, company events, or commercial promotions can be highlighted with pony rides or horse drawn wagon and carriage services

Expressman has competed in SASS for years and, in fact, has won more than 200 buckles. He has acted in our Wild West Shows and when no one else was available, he took over the reins of SASS Mounted Shooting and served as Match Director for END of TRAIL! I particularly remember END of TRAIL 2009 when we had a difficult time getting the arena footing the way we wanted it. Jerry was on his paint horse, Taffy, and turned the far barrel when she lost her footing and went down flat on the ground. Jerry stayed in the saddle while Taffy regained her feet and continued the run without a missed balloon. So if you're looking for some excitement or just looking to improve your horsemanship, give Jerry a call next time you have a hankering for that Old West adventure of your dreams.

Most of us get started in SASS due to a love of the Old West, its honesty, excitement, and adventure, or a love of the Hollywood version that we seem to watch incessantly on the big or small screen. For many of us we watch our westerns and we shoot our SASS matches, but there are some who live the western life style and have experienced first-hand most of the adventures of our forefathers. Expressman, Jerry Bestpitch, is one of those who has pretty much done, and continues to do, all things western.

I first met Expressman in the 90s (19 not 18) while rehearsing for an END of TRAIL Wild West Show. Jerry was working on the Pony Express Mount where you run alongside your mount and swing into the saddle at virtually a gallop. In this case Jerry swung too far over the horse and came down on the right side of the horse with only about 10 yards to the railing. I thought he was in a lot of trouble, but to my Tulsa, OK I am Six Gun Son, aka James Renfro, SASS #34124. I have tried to put into words how thankful I am to have received the SASS Scholarship twice, 2010-2011 and again this year 2012-2013, but there just are not enough words to say THANK YOU! I began Cowboy Action shooting when I was eight years old. At 21, I still get just as excited as I did then when I go to the range to shoot a match with my cowboy friends. I am so blessed to have parents Fly, SASS #16830 and Just L, SASS #34123, who introduced me to SASS and Cowboy Action Shooting.

My cowboy friends are a huge part of my life then and now. I was fortunate to have been raised by a host of cowboys and cowgirls, Indian Territory SASS and Oklahoma Territorial Marshals. I can remember all the cowboys and cowgirls showing up to my school assemblies or a high school football game. There's nothing better than looking up into the stands and seeing a sea of cowboy hats, as my friends thought they were so cool. That made me stand just a little taller.

It seems like every big event in my life, the cowboys were always there. They were there when I shot my first big SASS match as a Buckaroo (telling me how good I did no matter how many I missed), when I shot my first big match as a Young Gun, when I turned 16 and got my driver's license and first truck, Senior Night at my high school football game, and when I graduated High School.

I play football at Northeastern State University where I am a sophomore on the field and a Junior in school. I will graduate in 2015 as a fifth year Senior with a double major, Safety Management and Environmental Safety. This year at our last home football game I once again looked up into the stands to see a very large group of cowboy hats and friendly smiles, and again was reminded how lucky I am to be a part of a family so dedicated to each other. I am humbled when I see my fellow athletes and students who do not have family to come see them at school.

This year at END of TRAIL, my parents were so thrilled to go for their first time, and proudly contribute to the many opportunities for the SASS Scholarship. I think they are still smiling with pride. To the many people who contribute to the SASS Scholarship fundraising,

I would like to say "thank you." Your continued support has helped me in so many ways. 🤞

Timeline of a Disaster . . .

11:55 AM – After a final snatch of a garment bag of my most precious clothes, including my wedding dress, Mike and I literally peel out of the driveway. I am distraught to leave the horses behind, but know we have no way to transport the huge animals. The horses are contained on 25 acres, with pasture and ponds, and I know the owners are on their way.

As we leave our driveway for the 2 1/2 mile drive down the dirt road out of Paradise Park to the main road, we pass firefighters going property to property, and neighbors gathered at points along the way, watching the growing cloud. It is surreal. It is a beautiful spring day, yet disaster literally looms on the horizon. Mike knows a sudden change of direction of the strong winds will endanger all our lives.

12:15 PM – We pass our horse friends on the main road, heading in the other direction with their convoy of pickup trucks and trailers. All I can do is wave as they fly by. When they reach Paradise Park, they are refused entrance by the sheriff stationed there, due to the extreme danger. Later, they tell me they were relieved to see we had made it out safely, and we had made the right decision to get out when we did, leaving the horses and donkeys where they had a fighting chance to protect themselves.

We board the cat, stash our stuff in a storage unit, and continue to town, hungry and somewhat at a loss. We purchase comfort food, toothbrushes, and a change of clothes for Mike. We call on friends and family to pray. We prepare to spend the night in a spare cabin at Sylvan Dale Guest Ranch, where we've known the owners for years.

The glow of the fire is on the horizon, and smoke is everywhere. I sleep fitfully, feeling this can't be for real, waking often and remembering things I forgot to take. We did not know the fire had already grown to 8,000 acres and taken a life.

Sunday, June 10

At 6 AM, we give up trying to sleep. We contact neighbors, and set up an email list so we can keep each other informed. Everyone made it out. The fire is advancing. Stories abound of whose house is still standing, and whose is gone. I have a gig to do. There is nothing we can do to help the situation, so we decide to keep the gig, in hopes it will keep our minds off of things for a few hours. The audience did not expect us to still come, and are kind and supportive. Oddly, it ends up being one of the best gigs I've ever done.

At dinner, we receive an honest and dejected email saying the fire was across the road and the firefighters have been driven out of Paradise Park. All is feared lost. We pray for a miracle, and search the Internet relentlessly into the evening for aerial photos and updates.

Monday, June 11

Continuing to keep tabs, we receive another email confirming the fire has indeed swept the whole of Paradise Park, and at a meeting with a thousand other evacuees from neighboring areas, the Fire Chief confirms Paradise Park was heavily burned. I have already registered the missing horses and donkeys with the Humane Society, and now have to call the owners to tell them the potential terrible news.

But then, that evening, a reliable call comes to us saying while our beautiful home and outbuildings were indeed lost, our Studio — containing valuable equipment, research materials and resources, and where Mike and I had lived comfortably the first year we were married — has survived, at least for the moment. Our miracle! In the midst of the emotions of the great loss we have just endured, we are ecstatic there is something to which we can hope to return.

Tuesday, June 12

We are able to make direct contact with the lady in charge of handling all evacuated animals, and around 6 PM, we are elated to receive the call reporting the horses and donkeys have been found and rescued. Thank God — another mir-

UPDATE

POTAMUS KAYE, SASS #38950

aka Kelsey Cler

This summer marks 20 years since I started shooting with SASS. When I think of the shy, preteen girl I was when I started, it amazes me to think how far I've come. Cowboy Action Shooting™ has been a vital part in my growth, both in my personal life and in my career.

Now, two years after graduating from college in Missouri, I am a health educator with Maine General Medical Center in Waterville, Maine. I work with the community and staff to increase quality of life through prevention practices. One of my favorite things to do in the workplace is casually mention I'm a past Wisconsin State Champion in Cowboy Action Shooting™ and watch people's reactions, gauging from confusion to jaw-dropping admiration (which I of course bask in the light of). Having been a state champion in Cowboy Action Shooting™ is a great icebreaker, and it is a wonderful way to show gun use in a safe, fun way to people that traditionally associate guns with violence against people or animals.

I actually have a tattoo on my right ankle of crossed revolvers with shooting stars. It's not so much to mark my success, but rather to forever memorialize the wonderful times I've had with my dad, Doc Bonecutter, SASS #21133, and my younger brother, Coppertop Kid, SASS #38951, another SASS Scholarship recipient, and the wonderful times I hope to have at Cowboy Action Shoots in the future.

I drove the 24 hours home to Wisconsin for Christmas so I could pick up my guns and equipment, and get back to shooting after a two-year break. This summer my dad, brother, and I will be converging on the Ohio State match, coming from Wisconsin and Maine to meet (kind of) in the middle. I have to wipe off the rust from my trigger finger, and my significant other will be competing for the very first time this summer, so I've got to whip him into shape, too!

Cowboy Action and the SASS Scholarship Fund have played a huge part in shaping who I am and where I'm going. I am forever grateful, and am looking forward to a long future of competing in (and surprising new acquaintances with) my favorite activity! 🤠

acle! My heart has more peace, even knowing this ordeal is far from over.

FOLLOWUP

Before the fire had run its course, it had grown to more than 87,000 acres, devoured 259 homes, and taken a life. At its peak, over 2000 firefighters from across the country and beyond came to our defense. On June 29, we were finally given permission to return "home" to our Studio, to view what remained, and begin the tough process of cleanup and rebuilding.

The horrendous winds, the drought situation, and the remoteness of the houses made it impossible for the brave firefighters to save every home. They said this fire came back and re-burned areas it had already torched, and had to be fought off of Paradise Park three times. They called it a "dirty" fire.

Through it all, the outpouring of love and support sent our way has humbled and amazed us. I can never properly express our gratitude to everyone, literally from around the world, who helped in our time of need. Our SASS family was there for us, too, giving donations and business when we still had bills to pay. A million thanks to every one of you who were there for us when we were emotional wrecks and couldn't even compose a complete sentence, and are still there for us now, as we continue the healing process.

Yes, we have returned and plan to stay. In the past year, on good days and bad days, with the help of a multitude of friends, we have sifted and cleared away debris, cut hundreds of burnt trees, and slogged through countless other necessary chores. You have bought us groceries, dinners, and drinks, and donated gift cards, money, clothing, kitchen supplies, and furniture. While our insurance company came through with flying colors, you helped get us through the toughest times, and we are humbly grateful.

Thank you, thank you, thank you, friends and loved ones. We continue to make progress, because that's who we are. Even more so, because we have good friends, and a good God. May He bless you, and keep you, even as He has kept us, and blessed us through this unexpected and tough year, especially as He has blessed us through you.

Times listed are to the best of my recollection.

WE REMEMBER

Cleef, Ben Cooper, and Buster Crabbe. The stages, written by the Match Director, Doc Kemm, SASS #52557, were great, with big, close targets, no "P traps," and a reasonable amount of movement, but not so much as to make it a running contest! Not that there weren't any challenges—many of the stages offered a shooter's choice, so you had to think a bit about how best to engage the targets. At the end of the match pretty much all were in agreement these were fast, fun stages, and if you had misses or procedures, well, they were "earned."

Saturday night a Grand Ball was held so many could show their individual ideas of what it felt like to be in a small town in the West in the late 1800s. After a fine social hour, during which a costume contest was held, a great meal was served. After the ball, under the able direction of the Master of Ceremonies and Assistant Match Director, Whiskey Mac, SASS #34904, awards were presented for the costume contest winners, as well as side matches, Wild Bunch™, and Blackpowder match. A number of raffles for various items, including revolvers, action jobs, knives, and such were also conducted for the enjoyment of all, especially those who won!

A very special award named "The Isom Dart Award" was given to a great Cowboy Action Shooter, Splinter Houser, SASS #20742. Splinter emulates all the qualities Isom Dart, SASS #8096, has shown over the years here in the Southeast. They both travel to many shoots, give more than is asked each time they shoot, and are well-loved and respected by all. Congratulations Splinter, you EARNED it!

On Sunday morning, Knot Hardly Dunn, SASS #43113, gave a very moving and heartfelt tribute to all Veterans. A Marine himself and with a son currently serving with the USMC, he showed all of us

The Jail was deemed to be the best permanent prop on the range.

These lovely young ladies, Carolina Girl and Sue Render, tied for Best Dressed Lady. As with the shooting, the costume contests were hard-fought and narrowly won.

present how important it is to 'Fight the Fight' to preserve our great country, and to acknowledge those that do. Knot Hardly's wife, Shamrock Sadie, SASS #78511, (who was also the chief scorekeeper and general computer expert for the match) is a U.S. Army Veteran also, so it not hard to understand his intense feelings. After the tribute, the main match awards were presented, including 26 clean match awards. Sixgun Sallie, SASS #38989, and Red River Ray, SASS #33254, EARNED the right to be the top female and male shooters! This was Ray's third straight Gunfight at Givhan's Ferry victory! Congratulations to both Sallie and Ray. As winners of the Southeastern Regional they are now invited to shoot at END of TRAIL's World Championship of Cowboy Action Shooting™ in 2013.

After all of the awards were given, some final and important drawings were held for the SASS Scholarship Fund and for a local veteran's home. $860 was raised for the SASS Scholarship and $250 for the Veteran's Victory Home in Walterboro.

The final shoot-off (expertly designed and managed by Carolina Gray Dawg, SASS #32828, proved to be as exciting as could be expected with the top 16 male and top 8 women shooters going head to head against each other. With all knock down targets on multiple levels, it was a spectacle well worth waiting for. Talk about flying lead and steel, this was it! There was also a shoot-off for Buckaroos and Young Guns. Dirty Dead Eye Cotton, SASS #96276, and Jessie Mae Mucho, SASS #96394, shot it down to their last shotgun shell, resulting in perhaps the first tied shoot-off ever! When all of the Cowboy vs. Cowboy shooting was over, Island Girl, SASS #2451, and Santa Fe River Stan, SASS #36999, were awarded the Shoot-off trophies.

As in all Cowboy Action events, the shooter who competes and enjoys the people and the match is always a winner. Thank you to all of you winners who became the Gunfight at Givhans Ferry, 2012. 🐾

The more time one spends researching the Old West, the more interesting and almost forgotten people one will find. The story of Frank Boardman Eaton is a prime example. It is a story that seems tailor-made for Hollywood and strikes some as “too good to be true.”

The story begins with Frank Boardman Eaton being born in 1860 in Hartford, Connecticut. Eaton moved with his family to Twin Mound, Kansas when he was eight years old. Shortly after the Eaton family’s arrival in Kansas, six former members of Quantrill’s Raiders killed Eaton’s father. The six were members of the Campsey and the Ferber clans and were one-time Confederates who had turned outlaw since the end of the Civil War.

After the murder, family friend Mose Beaman took the eight-year-old Frank aside and told him it was the boy’s duty to avenge his father. The story Eaton told was Beaman gave him an old Navy revolver, taught him to handle the gun, how to mold bullets, and led the boy through years of intensive practice. Frank Eaton soon became so good with the old Navy Colt that he mastered “point-firing;” accurately hitting his target by simply jerking his gun from the holster, pointing at his target, and pulling the trigger. Eaton quickly gained a reputation for being able to hit whatever he turned his pistol toward without the need to “aim.”

In 1876, Frank, his mother, and two sisters moved to the Indian Territory, settling in the Cooweescoowee District near the present-day city of Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Frank Eaton was still just fifteen years old when he traveled to Fort Gibson, Indian Territory in hopes the soldiers stationed there might have something to teach him about marksmanship.

The teenaged Frank Eaton reportedly outshot all the soldiers at the fort. The commander at Fort Gibson, Colonel John Joseph Coppinger, praised Eaton as “the best shot he’d ever seen” and gave the teenager the knick name “Pistol Pete.” In fact, the phrase “hotter than a pistol” was originally “hotter than Pete’s pistol” and was a reference to Frank Eaton and his prowess with a pistol.

Eaton’s accuracy with a pistol was, in and of itself, remarkable. But it was even more so because Eaton had only one good eye. His left eye was “crossed,” permanently focused to the right of his left eye socket as if always staring at some point along the side of his nose.

Soon after his visit to Fort Gibson, the teenaged Eaton learned that two of the men who had killed his father, Doc Ferber and Shannon Campsey, were living in a cabin on the Canadian River, making their living as cattle thieves.

Eaton rode up to the cabin of Ferber and Campsey, challenged the two men, and killed both Ferber and Campsey while Shannon Campsey was in the process of aiming his rifle at Eaton.

Since both Doc Ferber and Shannon Campsey were wanted for cattle rustling, their deaths prompted the Cattlemen’s Association to hire Frank Eaton as a Cattlemen’s Association Detective, a job that gave Eaton all the authority he needed to pursue the other gunmen involved in the murder of his father.

Doc Ferber’s brother, John, had been selling the cattle stolen by Doc Ferber and Shannon Campsey. Eaton traced John Ferber to Missouri, but the night before Eaton arrived, John Ferber was killed as he was caught cheating at cards.

Eaton stayed for the funeral to, as he said later in life, “making double damn sure John Ferber was really dead!” During the funeral Eaton discovered two of the other men involved in his father’s death, Campsey Clan members, Jim and Jonce Campsey, had a small ranch in the Ozarks. Eaton tracked down the two, challenged them to a duel, and killed both of them.

In 1885, Eaton served as scout in the Army’s fight against Geronimo. At the end of the campaign, Eaton returned to the Indian Territory and became a deputy U. S. Marshal under Federal Judge Isaac Parker, reportedly killing six more men in the line of duty.

In 1887, Eaton learned that Campsey Clan member Wyley Campsey, the sixth man involved in the murder of his father, was tending bar in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Eaton caught Campsey behind the bar in his saloon. Eaton shouted, “Fill your hand, you son of a bitch!” Eaton then shot Wyley Campsey twice through the heart as Campsey reached for a gun under the bar. In the gunfire Eaton was wounded by Wyley Campsey’s two guards, but managed to kill both men.

Wyley Campsey was the final man involved in the murder of Eaton’s father, and his death apparently ended Frank Eaton’s quest for revenge. Eaton married and moved to the Indian Territory, buying a claim west of present-day Perkins, Oklahoma where he served as sheriff. His wife died in 1902 and a year later Eaton remarried and moved into Perkins where he opened a blacksmith’s shop. Over the years, Frank Eaton became a legend in and around Perkins, Oklahoma with his bushy mustache, his long braided hair, and his habit of always dressing the part of a cowboy from the last quarter of the nineteenth century: cowboy hat, vest, and blue jeans or frontier pants, and, of course, a loaded .45 Colt pistol.

Two students from what was then Oklahoma A&M College, the current Oklahoma State University, saw Eaton on horseback in a 1923 Armistice Day parade and thought Eaton’s “Pistol Pete” would be perfect as a college mascot to replace the Tiger the school then used as a mascot. It took thirty-five years to make the switch, but in 1958 that “Pistol Pete” was adopted as the school’s mascot. Thirty-six years later, in 1984, the university officially sanctioned the “Pistol Pete” caricature as a licensed symbol.

From 1950 to 1956 Eaton wrote a weekly column for The Perkins Journal that consisted of musings on his philosophy of life along with his recollections of his days of the frontier.

In 1952, Little, Brown & Company published Eaton’s autobiography, Pistol Pete, Veteran of the Old West. In 1957, Frank Eaton wrote his second book, Campfire Stories: Remembrances of a Cowboy Legend, but it wasn’t published until 1998.

Frank Eaton died in his sleep at his home in Perkins, Oklahoma on Tuesday morning, April 8, 1958, at the age of 97. He was posthumously inducted into the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in 1997. ♠

Gunfighters In The Old West

shooting with determination to be the winner against another Cowboy.

Who were some of those fabled gunfighters? All outlaws? All vicious murderers indiscriminately mowing down anyone in their path? Not necessarily. Many shootists became lawmen at some point to help tame the open towns of the Western Great Plains. There were a few Gunfighters who did bad ... and a few who turned good. SASS Gunfighters are all GOOD!

William Tilghman was born in Fort Dodge, Iowa July 4, 1854. Later the family moved to a homestead in Atchison, Kansas.

After leaving home at the age of fifteen, Tilghman became a hunter of animals and over a five-year period claimed he killed 12,000 buffalo. This brought him into conflict with local Native Americans, and during one skirmish in September 1872, Tilghman killed seven Cheyenne braves. Two years later he narrowly escaped being lynched after he was falsely accused of murdering a man in Granada, Colorado.

In 1875 Tilghman, although a life long teetotaler, opened a saloon in Dodge City. Three years later he accepted the offer of his friend, Bat Masterson, to become his deputy sheriff. Tilghman developed a reputation as a courageous and honest

As the depths of Winter set in, thoughts of the first Cowboy Competition in April begin to chase the thoughts of three months away from our sport. I ponder the origin of Cowboy Action Shooting™ and its origin more than 125 years ago in the Old West. One of SASS' categories is Gunfighter, using both revolvers in alternating shots, left, right, back and forth, and one of the most difficult to master. But, the term "Gunfighter" came from not both hands filled with our revolvers, but a class of people who made their way

LITTLE KNOWN FAMOUS PEOPLE Way Out West -

Tom Threepersons

Joe Fasthorse, SASS #48769

Tom Threepersons was a Cherokee lawman. He was one of the last gunfighters of the Old West. Threepersons was born in the Indian Territory in 1889 and moved to Montana with his family, and the family of his friend Bill White, in 1905. In 1907, both boys' fathers were killed during a fight with cattle rustlers. Threepersons tracked the killers to a saloon and killed them in a shootout.

Tom and Bill joined the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, and were assigned to capture a gang of outlaws who had murdered an entire family. The two tracked the outlaws through deep snow to the Yukon River, and on the fifth day caught up with the three killers. A gunfight erupted and Bill White and one desperado were killed. The other two bandits fled. Threepersons buried White and continued after the outlaws. Three days later Tom located the cabin where they were hiding out and a shootout ensued. Both outlaws were killed.

In his career with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, Threepersons was involved in numerous shootouts, once killing three robbers during a failed bank holdup, and later foiling a train robbery. In 1912 he left the force. He joined the U.S. Army in 1916 and chased Pancho Villa in Mexico. He was discharged from the army in 1920. In 1922, Tom killed four more men in two firefights at El Paso, Texas.

Threepersons died in Arizona in 1969, and is buried in Silver City, New Mexico. 🐾

lawman and later became marshal of Dodge City.

Tilghman moved to Oklahoma in 1889 and after establishing a homestead at Guthrie, he was appointed as a Deputy United States Marshal. Unlike other lawman, Tilghman rarely resorted to using violence, and during his career killed only two criminals in gunfights. Tilghman, Heck Thomas, and Chris Madsen became known as the Three Guardsman and were largely responsible for wiping out organized crime in Oklahoma. This included hunting down Bill Doolin and his gang.

It is claimed Tilghman was paid more reward money than any other law officer. Another famous lawman, Bat Masterson, described Tilghman as "the greatest of us all."

THE GUN THAT WON THE WEST

The NEW WINCHESTER- Made MODEL 1873 »

Frederick Jackson Turner spent a pleasant half hour with Winchester's Glenn Hatt discussing Winchester's latest release of it's own Model '73 in .38/.357.

By Frederick Jackson Turner, SASS #28271

I had the pleasure of speaking with Product Development Engineer Glenn Hatt at the annual SHOT Show this past January in Las Vegas. The SHOT show is filled with toys that would make any firearms enthusiast fairly drool with desire, but there was one product I was determined to lay my hands on, the new production Winchester Model 1873 rifle.

Glenn is a very interesting guy; in addition to his engineering background, he has four children, and regularly enjoys hunting and fishing. And, he really likes his job; that was evident. I found him to be very knowledgeable about the history of not only Winchester, but firearms in general, and J. M. Browning in particular.

The initial Winchester offering is a rifle configuration, including a rifle-style butt plate. Future offerings will likely include a carbine configuration as well.

Now, if you're like me, you're probably wondering why it took so long for Winchester to get this thing into production. Untold thousands of sales were lost to Uberti, as Cowboy Action Shooters embraced the 1873 design for its simplicity, ruggedness, and ability to, when properly tuned, flat fly. But there is a lot of work that goes into that. Uberti's mass production techniques mean you buy the basic 1873, and then get to work on it, just to make it suitable for our use.

Glenn explained the decision was made for Winchester to produce these rifles through their top-end manufacturer, Miroku. While some may quibble the rifle is not made in some now-gun-unfriendly state here in the U.S., there's no arguing with the superb work that goes into the Winchester reissue series. The fact this is made by Miroku is a plus, in my book. I've had a couple of Miroku rifles in the past, and I promise you, when it comes to excellent construction, precise tolerances, and high quality steel, they represent the pinnacle of gunmaking in the world today.

Then, there's the caliber discussion. So far, no hard-to-sell .32-20 or .38-40 chamberings; those decisions will be made as the market dictates. The fact it is being released initially in .38/.357 means they're listening to the buyers (read Cowboy Action Shooting™!) market. Hatt did not rule out other caliber chamberings, implying they are listening to what the consumers truly want.

The action on the "out of the box" rifle is pleasingly smooth with modest spring pressure. According to Winchester, the key is achieving a quality product with exacting tolerances.

Will an aftermarket "short-stroke" kit work in the new Winchester Model '73? The guarded answer was the gun is made as close to the original specs as possible ... and the aftermarket will have to determine the answer ...

Here's the transcript of the interview.

FJT: Glenn, what's your title?

GH: Product Manager; I came into this position from the Design Bureau.

FJT: Have you developed any interesting designs with which I might be familiar?

Glen: Have you heard of the Winchester SXP and the FN SLP? (Hey! I have one of those!) FN's parent, FNH, is the US arm, Winchester is the sister company.

FJT: How long have you been with Winchester?

GH: 15 years; I came from Research & Development as a design engineer, when the opportunity arose.

FJT: Okay, why the '73?

GH: Customers demanded it. There's a market for it as a historical piece, and of course, there's the Cowboy Action Shooting™ market. Then, it was also an emotional decision. It IS the gun that won the West! It is a key component of U.S. History, and we felt the manufacture of it should belong in U.S. hands. Curiously, it's the only Winchester Historical Replica that's NOT a John Browning design! Now, most Winchester Historical Replicas are limited edition—historical pieces. They are limited editions, so everything is hand machined, not just mass produced. In other words, these are made the way they were a hundred years ago, only with modern steel on modern machinery. After all, we know these are going to be used.

Then, it was the perfect time, from a business standpoint. The '92 market was filled, which opened a hole for manufacturing this rifle.

FJT: How close is it to an original?

GH: Well, the tolerances are great, as you can see, (hands me a '73, which cycles very smoothly and with modest spring pressure) and the design is right out of our blueprints.

There is an inertial firing pin safety, like the 1886. That was a decision that needed to be made, but that kept an unsightly, and unoriginal safety off the exterior of the rifle. It's an added safety feature, and you'll never know it's there, unless you're a gunsmith. There are a few coil springs that we added. Again, you won't know, unless you're a gunsmith, or you get to wondering why this darned thing never breaks down.

FJT: Will the aftermarket parts that Cowboy Action Shooting™ gunsmiths use fit in this thing?

GH: Well, we went with interchangeability with our existing models as a goal; think of this as a hand-fitted original. Peter Sodoma, SASS member, 'Crazy Ivan', was the primary engineer on this project. The aftermarket will have to see. But, we made this as close to an original as we could, and still meet our standards for quality.

FJT: Do you anticipate other models?

GH: We are looking at more color-case-hardened models, calibers, a carbine butt stock, different barrel lengths, and octagonal barrels. The market will help us determine that.

We chatted a bit more about the market, SASS, and shooting in general. It was a pleasant half hour. I really enjoyed talking to him, and I especially enjoyed his passion for his craft. Perhaps the most telling thing was his last comment to me. 'I believe in this gun, and this decision by Winchester. It's a good gun, a really good gun, or we wouldn't put our name on it. It's well made, and if it wears out, it'll only be because you loved it.'

TULE SPUD, SASS REGULATOR #35180

4 July 1952 – 9 February 2013

By Wimpy Hank Yoho, SASS Regulator/Life #19831

We in the Northwest have lost a One of a Kind, Wonderful Cowboy, Tule Spud, aka Tom Robison. He had been battling leukemia for over a year, and on 9 February 2013 the Lord called him home. His wife, Karen Robison, aka Juniper Jewel, SASS Regulator #35181, was by his side as were his son, Brian, and his sister, Nancy.

Tule grew up on the family farm and after graduating high school in Tulelake, California, attended college in Humboldt, CA majoring in Industrial Arts. Tule had real talent in woodworking, and was learning architecture as well. He told me he had worked building homes for a while after college, and growing up on a farm it fits that Tule became a farmer, growing a few different crops, but mostly potatoes. He was also an inspector for the county agriculture department, and for the last 10 years plus created the most beautiful three-dimensional metal works of art.

He and Juniper's company, Pacific Northwest Metal Arts, took them to many trade shows up and down the West Coast. They would also set up a booth at many cowboy matches, and he would donate a piece of his artwork to the prize tables at many matches as well. His inspirations for his art came from a love of fishing, hunting, and the outdoors. His artwork were cutout pieces of animals, fish, landscapes, etc. Tule would use grinders, sanders, or torches to give his objects texture and depth. He'd do ducks, eagles, a cut-throat trout with all the colors, with rocks in the bottom of the stream. I remember him showing me a Golden Lab he made from a plow disc. A client had given him a color photograph of the lab and when finished, you could see the hairs on that dog, and it was like the dog was right there in front of you. Many a Cowboy shooter has a piece of artwork made by Tule. I have one myself that I will cherish forever.

I don't remember exactly the first time I met Tule Spud, but I remember him being in my Posse in the late 90s at the 'Lithia Springs' monthly matches of the Jefferson State Regulators, of which I was a member. My brother, Whiney Henry Yoho, SASS Regulator/Life #19832, and I had been traveling 120 miles one way each month to Ashland if we wanted to shoot, as this was the closest SASS club for us. In 2001 a local club was forming in Klamath Falls called the 'Klamath Cowboys' and with Tule living in Klamath Falls, he and Juniper Jewel joined the club right away, as did my brother and myself. The following year I was voted in as Marshal and Match Director and Juniper Jewel was voted in as our Banker. It was over those next five years our friendship with Tule really grew, with him and Juniper becoming like our brother and sister.

Without Tule Spud our club would not have flourished as it did. Making targets no problem for a man with Tule's talents in metal, as well as making props and building fronts. He built us an ore cart that was on tracks, so we could have a moving target to shoot at. Whiney and I came back from Hell on Wheels one year, and I had taken pictures of their exploding door a shooter would blast open with a shotgun and go through to shoot more targets. So Tule built us one.

On one Sunday morning Tule came to a monthly match with some new targets he'd been working on, and a story of bad dreams about Potatoes with Red Eyes. Those spuds were evil! He'd cut out some targets in the shapes of potatoes with indentations for eyes, and he also had a new target—some rebar welded up like tree branches. He had a bag of taters with him, and Tule did grow some giant size potatoes. He had drilled a hole up the center of each tater, about halfway or so, then slid those over the rebar branches, and now we had a potato tree. We didn't know, what he already knew that when you put a dead hit on a potato with a shotgun round, that tater would explode! There would be flying pieces of potato for 40-50 feet in all directions!

I could go on and on about other items we ended up shooting at our matches, and the most creative props, too. When an artist such as Tule was involved, and his passion for Cowboy Action Shooting™ was as big as it was with him, the sky is the limit. He started a Blackpowder Night Shoot that happens every year in October. He was a member of the Dammit Gang aka 'What's My Name' Dammit!

Tule also loved to hunt, and he really loved to fish. He mentioned on more than one occasion this Cowboy Action Shooting™ was sure ruining his fishing time. He took many a Cowboy shooter out for fishing trips, and I know these Cowboys savor those memories of fishing with Tule.

Tule took a group of six of us, including Juniper on a hunting trip to Montana to shoot buffalo. We all dressed in our period clothes, and used .45-70s to take our buffalo down. It was a great time. Later, Tule wore a pair of buffalo chinks with his B-Western outfits, made from the hide of one of the buffalos he shot. I had the privilege of traveling and camping with Tule on numerous occasions to Cowboy matches throughout the Pacific Northwest, and we traveled together once to END of TRAIL at Founders Ranch.

Tule was much fun to be around, and was an outstanding marksman. Besides the Klamath Cowboys, he was a member of the NRA, the local Jefferson State Shooting Association, and a member of the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation. He donated artwork to Ducks Unlimited as a sponsor on many occasions. Tule also served on the board of Directors of the Klamath Sportsman Park where our shooting range was located.

I could sure add a lot more about our cowboy brother, Tule Spud, but I think y'all know we love him very much, and we will miss him. Tule Spud, truly a one of a kind cowboy – Rest In Peace, Brother. 🌵

CIMARRON DAN, SASS #12099

By Helda Huginkiss, SASS #23799

Golden Valley, AZ – Empty Saddles ... Empty hearts around the campfire ... SASS has lost an incredible friend. Cimarron Dan, aka Danny Cifers the mule man, left this earth for the green lush pastures of Heaven. A veteran, a state trooper, a gunsmith ... Cimarron Dan and his late wife, the beautiful Loon Lady, were part of our wonderful family of Mounted Shooters, members of SASS for many years, and friends to all they met.

Dan was in the service from 1975 to 1998. The last years of this career he served as a Recruiter. From there it was "North to Alaska" to serve as an Alaska State Trooper. Dan talked fondly of the time spent in Alaska on the edge of nowhere. But at some point he got "cold" and moved to Arizona where he made his own mule saddles, did some gunsmithing, and some collecting as well. He joined SASS and made friends from shore to shore!

Dan was always willing to help out, pitching in and lending a hand whenever he could. He was a gifted storyteller, too; he could really spin a yarn. Dan was a member of the Tombstone Ghost Riders Mounted Shooting Club. Dan and his faithful mule, Gus, were wonders to watch as they ran the Mounted Shooting patterns. We are sure he's riding that Big Range up in the Sky, Loon Lady by his side, with all the good guys in white hats ... on his big red mule, of course! Vaya Con Dios our good friend ... you will be missed. 🌵

TOMBSTONE JR., SASS #13712

March 1, 1948 – March 1, 2013

By Loco Poco Lobo, SASS Life #36108

Rochester, NY – It is with great sadness I write of the loss of a friend, work colleague, neighbor, and cowboy. On Friday, March 1, 2013, we suddenly lost Tombstone, JR., aka John F. Rizzo, on his 65th birthday.

Tombstone joined The Long Riders when the club was just getting started. A couple years later when my husband, Nawlins Kid, and I joined The Long Riders, Tombstone immediately took us under his wing.

Over the years, Tombstone shared his love of B-Westerns, the Old West, shooting, and SASS with everyone. The Long Riders and the Salt Port Vigilance Committee could always rely on Tombstone to mentor new shooters. Not a match could go by without a joke, and he always had a smile like a kid in a candy store!

When he wasn't working or playing cowboy, he was very active in the community. He enjoyed his PT Cruiser with his wife and car club. His extensive volunteer work with our local police to promote community relations and crime prevention was always appreciated, especially when he played Santa.

Tombstone is survived by his wife, Ellen, children, Christopher and Nicole, grandchildren, nieces, nephews, and countless western New York cowboys and cowgirls. Until we meet again in the great cowboy corral, complete with a pumpkin patch ... Vaya con Dios mi amigo!

SLINGSHOT, SASS #681

MALCOLM CATHCART

April 24, 1930 – February 10, 2013

By Dangerous Dale, SASS Life #3390

Payson, AZ – Malcolm Cathcart, aka Slingshot, SASS #681, to his shooting friends, was born in Bogata, Red River County, Texas. He joined the Marines right out of high school. He served during the Korean Conflict where he received two Purple Hearts and retired as a Master Sergeant after 20 years of service. After his military retirement, he was a farrier (horse shoeing) and worked in the California public school system as custodian for 20 years until retirement.

Slingshot began Cowboy Action Shooting™ in its early days in Southern California, shooting at the Camp Pendleton and Coto de Caza matches. He told me once of going to the matches on his motorcycle, with his guns, leather, and hat in the saddlebags.

He and his wife, Marge, moved to Payson, AZ, after his retirement from the CA school system. He continued shooting SASS, attending matches throughout Arizona, and was instrumental in starting the Tonto Rim Marauders Club in Payson.

Slingshot was an excellent shooter and a great teacher and mentor to both new and experienced shooters. For many years the Arizona Cowboy Shooters Association website had a picture of Slingshot with the caption "The Master." He won the Elder Statesman category at Winter Range and END of TRAIL in both 2001 and 2002 and the Arizona State Silver Senior category at Bordertown in 2001. He also won many annual awards from Arizona SASS clubs for finishing 1st in his category for the year.

Due to failing health, Slingshot was unable to attend matches the last few years, but he enjoyed visiting with his friends and hearing stories about shooting. He will be remembered as a great competitor, a supporter of Cowboy Action Shooting™, a great friend, and will be missed by many.

(Due to failing health in the past few years, Slingshot allowed his SASS membership to lapse, and his alias has been reassigned to another California cowboy ... but to all of us who knew him and shot with him over the years, he'll always be "Slingshot!" ... Editor in Chief)

DALLY, SASS #22878

By Dog Woman, SASS #22073

West Valley City, UT – Dally, aka O. Jay Smith, SASS #22878, joined the riders in the sky February 2013. He was a past president of the Wahsatch Desperadoes. We will always have fond memories of his fun and humorous wit. His stages were always creative, and you could almost visualize Miss Kitty or Marshal Dillon coming up behind you.

He was a talented storyteller. He said his stories were like coloring with words instead of crayons.

At our several campouts with the Desperadoes, we were entertained in the evening around the campfire with his stories. Even the year the fire danger was high, he had us believing the citronella candle sitting in the middle of the group was the most inviting of campfires. Many at Utah War also enjoyed his stories.

His time-honored words at the beginning of Rampage, the Wahsatch Desperadoes annual match, were, "Congratulations, you are all tied for first place!"

The love of his life, Dilly, was more than special in his life. At their 25th wedding anniversary, he remarried her at the range before the Wasatch Desperadoes match. What a way to celebrate!

Dally touched many hearts and was well known. He is gone, but forever branded in many of our memories.

Dally, you will be greatly missed by many who considered you a pard to ride the trail with.

RAILHEAD 2012

(20th Almost Annual Anniversary)

By Larsen E. Pettifogger, SASS Life / Regulator #32933

Williams, AZ – July the 4th is our Nation’s birthday and is an annual shooting event held in Williams, Arizona. What could be better than a 4th of July parade, apple pie, fireworks, and a first rate shooting experience? Williams, Arizona is located in Northern Arizona about 30 miles west of Flagstaff just off I-40. Williams was founded in 1881 and named after famed mountain man, Bill Williams. It was the last city on old Route 66 to be bypassed by I-40. Once Williams was bypassed, old Route 66 was decommissioned and an era came to an end. Williams is the railhead (hence the name for the shoot) for the railway that heads north to the Grand Canyon. Because of its 7,000 feet elevation, the temperatures are 20 to 30 degrees cooler than Phoenix, Arizona.

So, starting in 1988 valley cowboys began heading north to Williams for an annual shoot and respite from the valley’s heat. Railhead rapidly grew and was a “Regional shoot” before SASS even had a Regional program! The match took place in Buckskinner Park, a rustic but cramped park within the city limits. The shooting took place next to the city’s reservoir, and the long-range events were actually shot over the water into the woods on the opposite side. Unfortunately, after fifteen years of shooting Railhead in the park, the park and reservoir were made off-limits for shooting events. Other annual shoots were tried in different locations, but none had the charm and excitement of Railhead. Williams, like many small towns, was struggling to find as much business as possible. After five years of negotiating with the United States Forest Service, the City acquired a permit for a new shooting come to the new Railhead? Fortunately the answer to all three questions was a resounding YES, and Railhead was revitalized. The City only had the resources to create five shooting bays, so the match was limited to ten stages and 200 shooters.

As the 2012 July the 4th week-end neared, there was much excitement about Railhead and a good deal of anxiety as well. The range is in a cleared gravel bed. However, the tall pines surround it, and it was fire season! There were raging forest fires throughout the Southwest. After some delay in getting the final word on whether the shoot could be held, the word finally came along with three huge fire trucks. Photo 1. The three fire trucks and a tanker truck full of water were parked in the Railhead parking area and the match was given the green light to begin.

Thursday is always side match day with all the usual side matches, speed events, a Wild Bunch match, and long-range events. The main match takes place on Friday and Saturday with a morning and afternoon wave of shooters. Photo 2. Among the various stage fronts, there is always one familiar stage front as ACSA borrows part of the Winter Range train.

Photo 3. (The Grand Canyon Railroad runs from Williams to the Grand Canyon, hence the name Railhead.) The stages are written, designed, and reviewed by several top shooters and often the Winter Range Board to make sure they are fun for all, but still present a challenge to the fast shooters. As is the norm with Railhead, the Railhead 2012 stages were fun and exciting for shooters of all ages and skill levels. But, what separates Railhead from most shoots is what takes place on the range is only half the fun.

Williams loves cowboys and cowgirls. Almost every store in town has a Railhead poster in the window and many give discounts if you are wearing a shooter's badge. Williams hires several Wild West actors to walk around the streets and engage in shootouts and other horseplay on the 4th of July week-end. The City encourages our SASS cowboys and cowgirls to wear their outfits in town. The tourists think we are part of the show, and many shooters are asked for photographs. On the 4th the shooters are invited to march in the 4th of July parade. The City itself is a curious blend of late 19th Century Wild West and mid-1950s Route 66 architecture. On one end of town is the old brothel, designed and built for that purpose. Photo 4. The main street is a mixture of 19th and mid-20th century structures. Photo 5.

On the east end of town, right on old Route 66, several vintage buildings have been connected to form an Old West entertainment venue. Photo 6. This venue includes old storefronts, cafes, and a couple of cowboy bars. For Railhead a canopy is spread over the town square just in case a summer rainstorm takes place during the Saturday night dinner and prize drawings. Photo 7. There are free ceremony. In keeping with the Railhead theme, first place in each category is a train. Photo 9. And, for the shooter with the biggest train wreck during the match, the commemorative award is a train hitting a brick wall! Photo 10. Everything prizes and a few for which raffle tickets are sold. This year our ace raffle ticket saleslady sold a record number of tickets! Photo 8. After three days of shooting and three nights of local entertainment, Sunday dawned, and it was time for the Sweet 16 Shoot-off and the awards is over by around 1:00 p.m. so everyone can get on the road and beat the 4th of July traffic back to Phoenix.

What's in store for 2013? The City has added an extra bay, so there will be 12 stages and Railhead can now accommodate 240 shooters! It's much cooler in the pine forests, and the entrance to the range is literally 100 yards from Interstate 40. Simply take Exit 165, go north on Route 64 about 100 yards, and turn left at the Railhead sign. Many folks stop at Railhead on their way back from END of TRAIL. It's a great place to wind down and relax. Hope to see you there!

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

EL POSSE GRANDE - NMSO XIII - Shoulda Been A Western

Muncy Valley, PA – “What do you mean you’re sold out?”

“I’m sorry, but the theater is full and the next seating is sold out. Try back again in four hours.”

“But this something absolutely new, and we’ve got to see! Imagine, pictures that move! They won’t believe this back on the ranch.”

“Well, if you want them to believe you, then you’re going to come back in four hours. If you wander down to the livery, you can look at posters of the movies the theater plans to show in the future.”

As we were well heeled and could have pressed the situation, we were also raised in the cowboy way, and besides, the ticket booth attendant was a lady and ladies demand respect.

Since best pard and I had dropped off our small herd at the railhead in the tall timber of northern Pennsylvania, an area strange to cowpokes from the south, we had ridden into town and were amazed to find a “movin’ picture” house. Why it was like finding two aces in the hole!

Sure enough, the livery wall was alive with things that could only be imagined! Why, one showed some path that was a golden dirt road leading through some spooky territory that would urge most to consider a different direction. And another, The Cowboy Story, had some sort of “Major Award” that was the strangest looking rendition of a gal’s leg spur you ever saw. We heard later that a star of that flick, one Ralphie Parker, SASS #89214, was even in town!

Most cowboys give wide berth to snakes, but one coming attraction had a frantic pard surrounded by snakes! There were little snakes and big snakes, purple, green, orange, striped, and red snakes. They were coiled, climbing, hanging, and hiding. Why, there were even Methodist snakes! And then some new-fangled invention that was all metal and flew and had folks exclaiming the “need for speed” was the star of another. We couldn’t figure that one out.

What we had stumbled onto was the 2012 SASS Pennsylvania State Championships, staged in spectacular fashion by El Posse Grande of the North Mountain Sportsmen Association, Muncy Valley. They appropriately had entitled the Championship Shoulda Been a Western.

Taking the word of shootin’ friends that had long urged we attend was the best thing we could have done. The folks of El Posse Grande know how to do things to a fine turn. Master of Ceremonies, Major Spender, SASS #67756, ran everything from opening remarks, through Saturday’s banquet, to the auction for the Wounded Warrior project, and finally the presenting of awards with aplomb.

To show the “Cowboy Way” exists with clubs everywhere, consider these two examples: A very unlucky pup showed up under a camper the evening prior to the match. Unlucky as in having an experience with a porcupine. A search was begun for a vet to help, and one was finally located in Williamsport, quite a distance to the west. Cowboys to the rescue—a ride to and arrangements made to follow up for the pup’s care. At the banquet the hat was passed to take up a collection to offset the bill, and the generosity of the pards amounted to $249. The vet refused payment, but cowboys can be persuasive and made it clear that paying was our way. The vet confirmed the poor fellow was only a few days from serious problems. The pup??? He now has a new cowboy home and a new name—Quill!

The second would be the auction and collection for Wounded Warrior Project that amassed over $850. A big thank you to all who donated, bid, purchased, and donated when the wagon came around.

In addition to the winners, eleven straight-shootin’ cowboys earned the “Clean and Smooth Main Match” award. A control ask why does anyone need an “assault weapon.” This term, most often used by anti-gunners and the media, is a flagrant misnomer. Semi-auto sporting rifles are not military assault weapons that can fire fully automatic. Semi-auto sporting rifles may look scary to the faint of heart, but take away the cosmetic, military features and they still fire only one bullet with one pull of the trigger. As for high capacity magazines, they should remain legal for these rifles. When it comes to protecting your home and family, you want all the ammo your rifle and pistol can hold to thwart deadly attackers whether they be anarchist, terrorists, killer maniacs, or criminals.

Our Cowboy Guns Could Be Next! . . .

The President has issued highly political and questionable executive orders and actions many believe conflict with the founding principles of our Constitution. The Executive Branch was never meant to legislate by executive fiat. Our Constitution commands this. We who own guns know the 2nd Amendment protects all the other rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights and Constitution. This is what our forefathers intended. It’s a duty that requires vigilance by people living in a free society. It is the price of liberty. Honest people should question the intent and legitimacy of a government that seeks to disarm them under false pretenses and turn citizens into subjects.

If you are not an NRA member, I cannot think of a better time to join. We need to stand united against gun ban agendas. Our cowboy guns are not immune to confiscation should the government continue to infringe on our right to keep and bear arms. I encourage everyone to write their Senators and Congressmen to convey your sentiments.

SMOKE ON THE RIDGE II

SASS Pennsylvania State Blackpowder Championship

By Professor Silas Tinker, SASS #83502

Ickesburg, PA – For the second year the hollows and ridges of central Pennsylvania's Perry County welcomed cowboys and cowgirls to the 2012 SASS Pennsylvania State Blackpowder Championship.

The weather certainly promised to be warm, but the threat of rain held off until long after the smoke, fire, and brimstone of the Perry County Regulators' second hosting. Fifty-one followers of the Holy Black came to shoot, socialize, and fill the air with that distinctive sound and thump only the Lords and Ladies of Soot can provide.

They were presented with a totally new bay one, Al's Trading Post, named in honor of one of the founders of the Regulators, Albuquerque Al. The Regulators launched the start of a refurbishment of the range with the new Hotel, Bar, and Jail last winter, and this time went with a log cabin look—using real logs from a ninety-year old springhouse. Not only real logs ... but chinked to look very period authentic. It was received with many positive comments. Many of you know how hard it is to provide the "feel" of the West, and the Regulators are fortunate to have skilled and willing hands that can accomplish such projects.

What in the world is Herd Tender loading in that shotgun?

Cemetery has plenty of smoke to see through.

any potential procedural traps. Based on the movies, Big Jake, Silverado, True Grit, and Wyatt Earp, they all began with a line (usually Letort's favorite) and then to a shooting flow that comes from all his experience in writing stages.

Stage #1 started with lantern in hand, which had to be set down upright, then pistols, rifle, shotgun. What was a bit different was shooting the middle three rifle rounds on the pistol targets. Big Jake was, of course, John Wayne, while Richard Boone, who was to go on to television fame in "Have Gun Will Travel," played John Fain.

Silverado provided the line for stage #2 where the ridge provides an elevated shooting platform in the form of Fort Robinson. Also on this stage are the up-and-down cowboys set in motion with a shot to a tripper. These characters can provide a challenge to any cowboy, but are especially difficult if your target is covered with smoke. The stage started out in the left guard tower and moved to the central table for the pistol targets and then shotgun.

The first of three stages rooted in lines from Wyatt Earp (stage #3) had movement from the outside deck into the Livery where the pistol and shotgun targets were engaged. The shotgun targets are small rectangles set close together on a rail about twelve yards out and provide a challenge if there's no breeze to dissipate the smoke.

Stage #4 brings the task of engaging five rifle targets widely spaced out on the hill, then the second five go to the tripper and then the moving buffalo. If you get from the tripper to the buff quickly, you can get the last four dumped before he goes ten feet. The shooter then grabbed the moneybag and moved to the table on the left where the bag had to go on the table. After the pistol shots there, the shotgun was used back at the wagon where the stage started.

At least stage #5 allowed you to sit down—in the Regulator's outhouse! Open the door and engage the pistol targets then move from the outhouse to the table for rifle and shotgun targets. Don't step out of the "convenience" or a procedural will follow you.

The last stage has the shooter in the bar where shotgun and then rifle targets are shot. Then the first five pistol targets require a move to your left into the hotel, and the last five require a move the entire length of the stage to the jail, where the last pistol is shot through the jail bars.

In the posse where I was scorekeeper, there were a few occasions where the wheels came off the wagon, but the cowboy spirit was evident all day in humidity that was close to 100%. By the time the match was wrapping up, the pavilion's shade was a beaconing welcome to many, while others sought out the shade of camper canopies or trees as they cleaned their guns.

Several faces new to the Ridge were in attendance, and we hope you come back—either for our monthly matches or the 2013 Pennsylvania State Blackpowder Championships. Who knows what improvements await? 🤔

NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE FLAT GAP JACK SHOOT

By Diamond Daisy, SASS #28367

Candia, NH – Friday, June 29th, started out rainy and cool, but by late morning the sun came out and so did the side match shooters. The 2012 Flat Gap Jack N.H. State SASS Cowboy Shoot had begun.

Ninety-four shooters participated, coming from Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Florida, Main, and New Hampshire.

Many of the cowboys and cowgirls arrived Thursday to set up their campers. In doing so, they probably crossed paths with the unsung heroes of all shoots—"the put'er uppers and the take'r downers." These men worked long hours painting, refurbishing, and building

Independence Day, 1871. The Civil War is finished, but in Bleeding Kansas, old wounds heal slowly. Ex-Confederate guerilla Alexander Chastain has a score to settle with Crill Falkner, a former Union infantryman who is now the local law. Falkner bested Chastain in their first fight. But this go-round, Chastain intends to make Falkner and his town pay--in every way.

Our winners spanned the range of SASS competitors—from Buckaroos to Grand Dames and Elder Statesmen.

the posses. Folks of all ages were participating, but what was noticeable were the younger individuals just starting out. They were very aware of the safety rules, were trying their best, and picking up pointers. They are the future of Cowboy Action. The Grand Dames and Elder Statesmen, on the other hand, are seasoned folk who enjoy people and a challenge. Dressed in their western gear, it was truly heartwarming to watch these seniors shoot—their love of life and the sport was very obvious.

As each posse finished the last four stages, they broke for lunch, discussed the shoot, and awaited the award ceremony. While we're on the subject of lunch, some more unsung heroes to be mentioned were the cooks from Kinnicum Fish and Game Club. They did a great job—everything coming out hot and to order.

The plaques for the main match winners, made by Tazmanian Kidd, were beautiful—black with silver printing and edging. He makes the awards for all the shoots in the area—each different and unique.

Capt. Morgan Rum began handing out the awards amid claps and laughter. The winners graciously posed for pictures then headed back to their tables.

After the ceremony, people started to leave, others sat around rehashing the weekend. I wandered down to get a picture of the workers doing their thing. When all was done, they gathered at a back picnic table for the after the take down party ... and a few adult beverages!

I said goodbye to the boys, got in the car, and headed toward the gate. Looking back over the range, campers, and clubhouse I couldn't help but think of old Flat Gap. John Garst was his name, and according to Dakota Joe, a lifelong friend, he was one of the kindest most pleasant men you'd ever want to meet. He began the western shoots at Kinnicum back in the early 90s. John, his wife, Diane, and two daughters traveled throughout the West, where his interest in the game grew. He was one of the original 15 people who were responsible for making Cowboy Action Shooting™ in New Hampshire what it is today. John worked for the Department of Defense testing aviation fuel. Whenever Air Force One landed in Manchester, New Hampshire, his job was to verify the fuel going into the plane. His ancestors came from a little town in Tennessee called Flat Gap, hence his alias. In 2000, pancreatic cancer took him all too early to cowboy heaven.

I swear I could see him, smiling, looking down on the scene, saying, "Good shoot boys and girls. Wish I could have been there! See ya next year." 🤠 their posses and headed down to the range. Six main match stages were to be shot on Saturday and four on Sunday.

This year the stages were based on favorite Wacky Westerns—from Goofs and Saddles (1937), Evil Roy Slade (1972), and The Hallelujah Trail (1965) to My Little Chickadee (1940) and Blazing Saddles (1974). One of the most fun and difficult stages was number six—Shanghai Noon (2000). It took place on a train with 2 shotgun and 10 revolver rounds being fired from the engine and 10 rifle and 4 more shotgun being fired from the tender. Two of the rifle targets were shot through an open window and door of a building off to the side of the train.

When the day was done, folks freshened up and headed to the BBQ dinner.

Sunday morning was again hot and sunny. While wandering around taking pictures, it was nice to see everyone working together on

Gunfight At The Winter Camp

By Highwall Drifter, SASS Regulator #68975
Match Director

Ottawa Valley, Ontario – First, a little bit about us: we are located just north of the Medicine Line, the 49th parallel, due east of Canada’s capital, Ottawa. We cleverly named ourselves The Ottawa Valley Marauders (OVM) and are based at the Eastern Ontario Shooting Club (who have been 100% supportive of us from the start). We draw shooters from Montreal, Peterborough, Barrie, Orillia, and the entire width and breadth of the Ottawa Valley.

We tend to rip match themes right from the history books, but often we do something nutty. Like a tribute to “Apocalypse Now.” Not really Cowboy Action Shooting™ related? It is if you turn it inside out and call it Apocalypse ... West! Some start lines:

1. “Santa Fe. Shoot. I’m still only in Santa Fe!”
2. “We’re not supposed to be in Mexico, but that’s where I’m going. You just get me close to my destination, and I’ll cut you and the posse loose.”
3. “My mission is to make it up into the Black Hills. There’s a Colonel from the 7th Cav up there who’s gone insane. I’m supposed to kill him.”
4. “The Comanche knew his name by now, and they were scared of him. He and his men were playing hit & run all the way into the Dakota Territories.”

5. “My orders say I’m not supposed to know where I’m taking this wagon train. So I don’t. But one look at you, and I know it’s gonna be hot!”
6. “The Sioux didn’t get much R & R. They got cold grass and a little gopher meat. They had two ways home: death or victory.”
7. “All I wanted was a cattle drive. And for my sins, they gave me one.”
8. “If I say it’s safe to camp on that prairie, Captain, then it’s safe to camp on that prairie. Cherokee don’t camp!”

And on it went. We’re all about LPS (Laughs Per Stage).

The shooting conditions here are not unlike any other club in northern Wisconsin, Vermont, or New York state. It gets cold and snows a lot between December and March. So, our matches are limited to once per month, April through October. After kicking around the idea of a winter match for a couple years, we went ahead and just did it, like the slogan says.

Our main waddie offered to handle it, since I would be unavailable to wrangle this one. So I dropped the reins and let him go. Like a good cutting horse, Red Storm, SASS #76497, took off running with it. First, he drew up the stages and submitted them to us for approval. Not only were they fine stages, but we also learned a few tricks from him, and we’ve been writing 6 x 5 stage matches per year for 10 years.

The plan was to call a “team building day” at his shop and drag all the employees from his business out to the range the day prior to match day for set-up. As the day drew near, the forecast for set-up was snow, with a chance of heavy snow, followed by some more snow. Match day forecast was clear with manageable temperatures. So the “team building day” for all the gang at Sutton Aviation turned into “how many snowblowers can we get our hands on?” (Clangity Jane was left behind to lie to customers over the phone and in person as to why their aircraft was not ready). Well, they ran the snowblowers dry and gassed ‘em up again to create footpaths. Cold steel was hung down-range, the load/unload tables were put out, and the range was ready. Finally, Red was satisfied a good match could be produced.

The next day history was made as the first annual OVM winter match got under way February 9th, 2013. This weren’t no sissy indoor match held in the winter and called a winter match. This was outside, in costume.

Red and his kind are the guys who keep the tank treads of the Cowboy Action Shooting™ army greased, so others might show up and enjoy freedoms like a fine shootin’ match. Give them carrots and apples and perhaps a friendly rub of the poll and neck. That’s all they ask. Maybe straighten out their forelock, too.

We saw some photos in The Cowboy Chronicle a while back of a winter match somewhere in Pennsylvania said, “Haw! You call that snow?”

SCHEDULING SUMMER ANNUALS GETTING TOUGH? TRY COMBINING SHOOTS!

By Palaver Pete, SASS Life/Regulator #4375

Bend, Oregon Territory—just south of Ft. Nisqually, and north of Ft. Klamath – There are now 15 Cowboy Action Shooting™ clubs in the State of Oregon. Not bad for a state that size, especially when considering Texas has only 38 (not counting their mounted clubs). However, along with the joy of having more clubs comes the difficult task of scheduling summer annuals without conflicting with other clubs—that’s what the Pine Mountain Posse (PMP) discovered when they went to schedule their summer Annual Shoot for 2013.

As the number of clubs in the state increases, time frames available to book annuals goes down—a formula that could lead to hard feelings if not worked out cooperatively with other state clubs.

Accordingly, and in coordination with other clubs, the PMP not only moved the date of their annual from June to September, but they also decided to combine their traditional annual with the SASS sanctioned Oregon State Blackpowder Championship Shoot—a move that alleviates some of the scheduling pressure mentioned above. The two combined annuals will be held at the Central Oregon Shooting Sports Association Range (COSSA), outside of Bend, September 20 – 22, 2013.

The overall theme for both shoots will be, “Smokin’ Gunfight in the Badlands.” A sub-theme for the traditional annual will be “TV Westerns,” such as Bonanza, Maverick, and Gunsmoke. The State Blackpowder Championship shoot will be held Friday, September 20th along with various side matches. Shooters not interested in competing with blackpowder will be allowed to shoot the stages with smokeless powder, but will not be eligible for any state blackpowder titles. By being this flexible, shooters not interested in competing for blackpowder titles can still compete, have fun, and practice for the traditional annual that follows the next day. For questions concerning the Blackpowder shoot, call Cascades Annie at 541-382-1525, or visit the PMP website at: www.pinemountainposse.com. Shoot flyers and registration forms can also be downloaded at this site.

The traditional annual shoot

(the TV Western Shoot), consisting of 10 stages, will be shot Saturday and Sunday—5 stages each day. Stages will be designed to emulate one or more facets of the TV Westerns we enjoyed watching during the ‘hay day’ of TV Oaters. The award assembly for both shoots will be held after completion of Sunday’s shooting. For questions concerning the annual shoot, please call Whisperin’ Wade, at 541-318-8199 or visit the aforementioned PMP website listed above.

The PMP hopes to have at least 100 Shooters for the combined events. One of the side matches to be shot on Friday is a Wannabe Wild Bunch™, a fun shoot intended to bring more shooters into this exciting venue.

September is a great time of the year to visit Central Oregon. Free camping and motor home sites will be available at the range (no water or electricity), and plenty of coyotes to serenade you at night. Come on out to a friendly gun state and shoot with Pards who love to play Cowboy—you’re a Daisy if ya do!

SASS WILD BUNCH™ ONTARIO Provincial Championship

Ancaster, ON – The excitement was building months before the shoot with many people pitching in to get our dedicated Cowboy Action Range completed and approved so we could use it for the Ontario Wild Bunch™ Provincial Championship held October 5–7, 2012. Even with the hard work, the building did not get finished nor did we get the grass down, but everything else was completed, and our Provincial Chief Firearms Office approved the new range a week before the competition.

Being a Canadian shoot, it was most appropriate the stages follow a scenario from the old TV series, Sergeant Preston of the Yukon:

After the robbery of a shipment of furs and the murder of Skookum Charlie by parties unknown, the people of Forty Mile in the Yukon wired for assistance from the North-West Mounted Police. Sergeant Preston, with his horse, Rex, and his wonder dog, Yukon King, responded to their desperate pleas for help.

The North was a tough place for law enforcement. Men of every nationality were drawn to the Yukon by the lure of gold, and many resorted to criminal activities. However, nothing deterred Sergeant Preston from fulfilling his duties and upholding the law.

The story allowed for many great lines that sounded so wonderful when we were kids. They included “Stop, or I’ll shoot!” and “I think I got them on the run!”

Friday was set up day with time in the afternoon for the warm-up match. Saturday and Sunday were planned for shooting the 10 stage main match on our new range we call Robbers Roost. Match Director Legendary Lawman, SASS Life #73160, assisted by Serenity, SASS Life #64982, with hard working Range Master Stoney Creek, SASS Life/Regulator #4952, had everything ready except the weather!

Warm up day dawned clear, calm, and warm. The work party showed up, and targets and props were set for both the warm-up match and the first six stages the following day. While not all shooters were able to get there Friday afternoon, many took advantage of the warm-up match to put some lead down range and get their minds around racking instead of cocking. Shots were heard until darkness forced a stop to the shooting. We closed up the range, looking back with pleasure at what we had accomplished and anticipating the shoot to come.

About 10 p.m. the skies opened up, and all night you could hear the rain blasting against the windows of our home. I woke up a number of times during the night, and each time I could hear the rain hammering. Before I could get back to sleep, I reviewed Plan B and then Plan C. Across the city, Stoney Creek was going through much the same machinations.

Saturday morning dawned cold, but no rain. When we got to the range, the entranceway was a pond. While there was no water in the shooting area, the ground is very sticky Ontario red clay. Not to be deterred, the first few cowboys that showed up pulled on rubber boots and waded in to access the situation. The clay was not only slippery to walk on, it also stuck to your boots, and within a few steps, you were inches taller. Well — on to Plan B! We got out the four-wheel drive ATV and moved all the targets and just the necessary props to the regular handgun range. The few club members that showed up to shoot on the

 While there have to be winners, there were no losers at this match. The winners hold out their mugs engraved with the new Robbers Roost crest and individually engraved with their standing.

Serenity, Lady Modern Winner. Serenity was the administrator for this shoot and administers the Robbers Roost cowboy shoots throughout the year. She is the driving force behind the new riding range being developed for Mounted Shooting at Robbers Roost. At END of TRAIL where she competed in Wild Bunch™, Cowboy Action Shooting™, and Mounted Shooting, she was heard to say, "Sometimes I'm not sure whether to cock it, rack it, or say giddy up!"

Red Eye Ric admits he will never be the fastest shooter, but that doesn't dampen his enthusiasm. He is one of the stalwarts of Robbers Roost, always there to help and always with great advice. In 2013 Red Eye took on the task of being the cowboy range director for the club.

You can see the concentration that helped Clint Chisholm win the title.

handgun range that day were referred to the rifle range. The other members were very good about us taking over the range with no notice.

We started the safety meeting almost on time! After our salute to the flag and the safety briefing, we got down to serious shooting. Because of the handgun range set up, we still shot the first six stages, but worked backwards from stage six to stage one. This actually was a better 'plan' because the closer stages and bigger targets were shot first, thereby slowly introducing the shooters to the different Wild Bunch™ style. Many of our shooters have shot Wild Bunch™ warm up matches, but not a match adhering to the principles of longer distance and smaller targets. The first few stages used

10 to 12 metre distances with regular size cowboy targets. Pistol round count ranged from fifteen to twenty. As we got to the last two stages of the day, the distance went to 15 metres with a larger array of targets. We warned everyone we were just warming up for day two!

There were a number of seesaw battles during day one. In the early stages there was a three-way battle in Modern between Clint Chisum, SASS #42877, Legendary Lawman, and Slow Don, SASS #66977 (or as we like to call him, Not So Slow Don). As is usual in Wild Bunch™, malfunctions (or lack thereof) made the telling difference with Clint Chisum clearly in the lead the first night. In Traditional there was another three-way battle between El Guapo, SASS #80416, Wildcat O'Shea, SASS #47844, and Ned Brimstone, SASS #23957, with only two seconds separating the top two at the end of day one.

We had been treated to a wonderful lunch after the first three stages. The smart shooters (not very many) kept the lunch light. The rest of us enjoyed the hot soup and sandwiches that were very welcome on our first cold day of the season. The great lunch made it a struggle to get started on stage four, but we managed. After we finished six stages, we retired to the clubhouse for the leftover sandwiches and coffee to keep us warm and then on to the chronograph. Everyone passed, with the 'award' for the lightest load going to Chance Arizona, SASS #80609, who had a pistol power factor of 150.2! The warthog load 'award' went to Vicious, SASS #8014, with a rifle power factor of 254. Everyone had fun, but some breathed a sigh of relief after passing the power factor.

A stage briefing by our Range Master, Stoney Creek. Many of the shooters were shooting their first Wild Bunch™ match set up with smaller and more distant targets. Everyone is paying attention to the instructions.

El Guapo, Traditional Winner. El Guapo competes in Cowboy Action as Northern Crow but feels a different discipline deserves a unique name. He runs the cowboy section and is the Safety Officer in Barrie, Ontario. Under the direction of he and Lady Smith, they put on the first Central Canadian Championship.

We then had a great dinner at Clint Chisholm, Modern Winner. Clint is new to Wild Bunch™ shooting but is a long time Cowboy Action Shooter. With a very young family, his shooting time is limited. However he managed to "put it all together" to take top overall!

the clubhouse before heading home for a good night's rest. Meanwhile the committee sat and discussed options for the range for Sunday. Using the handgun range on Sunday was not an option as that is a very busy club day this time of year. All we could do was wait and see what the weather would bring. There were a few cowboys that threw rubber boats in their cars that night.

We had no rain overnight and none predicted until later Sunday afternoon. As is the cowboy way, lots of competitors showed up early Sunday morning to see what they could do to help. One of our non-cowboy club members got the tractor and put down some gravel on the driveway

Slow Don was new to Wild Bunch™, borrowing Serenity's equipment. He shot very well, placing 3rd in Modern and 3rd overall.

English Ken is a cowboy blackpowder competitor but not yet a Wild Bunch™ shooter. He came to help or to bury someone! In his costuming, the pose is perfect.

into the range. Others helped drop pieces of boardwalks from our old cowboy facades down as a dry pathway across the muddy entrance. From the 20-metre line forward (the area we would use today) the range was dry, but the shooting area behind would soon start to get messy with everyone tramping over it. Of course, we found a solution. We took apart some of the straw bales we were using for props and spread this across the range floor. As a result, no one got muddy feet, and the footing forward for movement was good and solid all day. What a relief. As usual, all the cowboys took the concerns in stride and helped out where they could.

You might remember how I hinted earlier about the first day being a warm-up for day two. Well, on this last day many competitors saw a dueling tree with six targets for the first time. Now to be fair, we also featured an almost full size cowboy on one of the stages, but that was only for 5 rounds! On the first stage of the day shooters engaged the dueling tree swingers with 10 rounds from their rifle at 20 metres and 10 rounds from their pistol at 10 metres, before dumping 5 on the cowboy. So that's what that notch on the back of the gun is for! A number of shooters finished that day with a promise to themselves to punch some paper and make sure their handgun is dead on.

The next stage was "so much easier" at 12 metres except you alternated shots between a 24" regular cowboy target and the 6" dueling tree targets. While there were some misses, I think everyone enjoyed the challenge and understood a little more about Wild Bunch™. We finished off the last two stages with large cowboy targets, but shot everything from 15 metres.

When all the shooting was done, everyone pitched in, the range was cleaned up in short order, and we all retired to the clubhouse for bowls of Serenity's wonderful chili that just hit the spot on the second cold day of the season. That gave us a chance to tally up the scores and hold the awards ceremony.

The awards were beer steins engraved with the new range's logo. All competitors got ball caps with the Robbers Roost logo, the first of their kind.

From the success and enjoyment of the shoot, we plan on doing the same next year (minus the rain). In the meantime, we have asked for suggestions from our shooters and other Wild Bunch™ competitors to see how we can improve. Our special thanks to all the participants! 🤠

THE WILD BUNCH CORNER

STARTER 1911 WB HOLSTER

By Cree Vicar Dave, SASS Life / Regulator #49907

A cowpoke can find most anything made today by surfing the WEB. A while back I was checking to see what different types of Cowboy Action holsters were available when a 1911 holster popped up. The "Classic Old West Style 1911 100th Year Belt Holster" showed up on the ole computer screen. It looked like it would be a good holster for "Wild Bunch," but I didn't know how well it would work.

After mulling it over a few days, I decided to place the order. They come in two styles. One is a plain holster; the other has a strap for a few bucks more. I decided to go all out and dole out the extra five spot for the strapped one.

Well, when it showed up at the door, I was pleasantly pleased with the product. It is not lined, but it is very well built for the price. The 1911

The 1911 pistol fits well in the holster. I painted a little "Draw Ease" on the inside of the holster. This will help until it is gets broke in.

Side view of holster. It has a good-sized loop to fit on a belt. I think it would be nicer if the holster canted out some to the back, making for a little easier draw.

It may not have as long a life span as a more expensive lined model, but it looks good, holds its shape, and functions well right out of the box.

The way I see it the LORD will probably call me home before my leather is half worn out anyway. It says in James 4:14 KJV, "Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanishes away."

Talk about vanishing away, after

A close up of the holster. I placed a small Concho at the top on the stitching to help the string from fraying.

Back view of holster. I reinforced the belt loop with Chicago screws. It probably would have been alright, but you never know when "Murphy's Law" will kick in.

Pistol in "Classic Old West 1911 Holster." I trimmed some of the excess leather from the holster belt loop to allow my second finger to slide up under the trigger guard. There were also other embellishments applied.

pistol fits correctly in the holster and the holster rides nicely on the belt.

After trimming a little leather to allow for a better grip when drawing, dyeing the holster cordovan to match my rig, applying a coat of "SUPER SHENE," rubbing a little "Draw Ease" to the inside, and attaching a small Concho, it was ready for use. I was amazed at how well it worked. In my view it functioned as well as my high end lined 1911 holster already in my possession. After trying this one and then the other, I really can't say that one works better than the other.

As I mentioned, this Classic Old West 1911 holster is not lined, but coming in at half the price of most lined ones, it is a pretty decent deal.

Front view of holster. The holster came in a brown color. I dyed it cordovan to match my rig.

writing this article I thought I would order another one of those Classic Old West 1911 holsters to have one handy to loan to a pard that might want to try Wild Bunch, and wouldn't ya just know it, they are backordered! It'll be over a month before they'll be in stock. I'll have to try again in a few weeks.

Colonel Dan, SASS Life/
Regulator #24025

THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE POWER ON EARTH

By Colonel Dan, SASS #24025, Life/Regulator

... in terms of the historical impact on humanity is not a nuclear explosion. It's not a massive military force. It's not hurricanes, tornados, earthquakes, tsunamis, or floods. It's not the plague, disease, pestilence, or epidemics of any kind. The historically most destructive power on earth by far is political power.

Let's look at the facts. The number of people killed or injured by the two nuclear detonations thus far experienced in man's history was approximately 135,000 in Hiroshima and 64,000 in Nagasaki, with tremendous physical damage to the cities. Dead and wounded from wars throughout history is impossible to accurately calculate, but I've seen estimates ranging from 1 – 2 billion. Natural disasters don't even come close; neither do diseases of any kind compared to the billions upon billions of people who have suffered throughout history as a result of man's endemic abuse of political power.

When I say "suffered" I mean death, injury, physical destruction of cities and homes, mental anguish, starvation, economic deprivation, stagnation and national indebtedness, oppression, loss of liberty, imprisonment, as well as involuntary servitude ... i.e., slavery!

The current population of the Earth is estimated at 7 billion. Now extrapolate that back through time, and the total number of people that have roamed the Earth who lived under some form of political authority is approximated at 100 billion.

Now reflect upon your history lessons regarding what political leaders throughout the ages have done, and you'll quickly see what I mean. Just consider a few consequences of the human epoch, which are singularly and directly attributable to the unconscionable abuse of political power: war, oppression, the economy, taxation, laws and regulation, and finally avarice on the part of political leaders wherein they live large at the expense of the general population while their "subjects" struggle to survive. You don't need me to remind you of how the ruling elite lived and reigned during periods in Egypt, Greece, Rome, Mongolia, France, Great Britain, the USSR, Communist China, North Korea, the numerous nations of Africa, Cuba, the dictatorships of Central and South America, etc., etc. And now the future of the United States may be about to continue its destructive journey on a frighteningly similar path as our own ruling elite fundamentally transform America and increasingly amputate us from the Constitutional Republic we were intended to be, putting us on a path to tyrannical rule emanating from Washington D.C.

All major political parties have been and are guilty. I say again, ALL MAJOR POLITICAL PARTIES have been exceedingly guilty in my eyes of expanding their personal political power at the expense of the American people, and it continues to grow worse with each passing year. I am NOT a Kool-Aid drinker of any party; never have been, never will be. I try to see truth as I am given the light to see that truth, regardless of political spin and disingenuous rhetoric. Long ago I learned to ignore what politicians say and instead watch what they do. As a consequence, what they have done has sickened me when I think about how our Founders broke the historical mold and were inspired to give mankind a new chance at liberty through our Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

Don't believe it? How much freer were you just a generation ago than you are today? How many more laws, regulations, and restrictions do you see in your life now than you did just 30 – 50 years ago?

How freer were your grandparents than you are today? Did your ancestors ever pay any income tax? Did they ever have to worry about the IRS coming down on them? Did they seriously have to worry about buying, carrying, selling, or shooting their firearms? Did they ever see the government dictating how much water they could use in their toilet facilities, how much money they could save for their later years, and when they were required by law to withdraw it, what kind of lighting they were to use in their own homes, what kind of health care they MUST have or face federal fines? Come on folks, you know I'm right.

And for those who fanatically support and will continue to blindly follow Obama and the current crop in Washington on BOTH sides of the aisle, you needn't waste your time emailing me your indignation over this column since I won't waste my time responding with logic and facts that you'll ignore anyway. If you haven't seen or can't see the truth at this point, there's no way I can enlighten you now. You've bought into the propaganda and will have to experience the suffering in your own lives and that of your children and grandchildren before the light of reality inevitably dawns. Unfortunately, by then it will be far too late—for all of us. You'll find yourself, along with the rest of the USA, on a pathway to tyranny. Don't believe it? Tell me the last time government retracted in size and scope. Tell me the last time government passed any significant legislation that restricted its reach and gave the people more liberty.

As Jefferson so insightfully wrote, "The natural progress of things is for liberty to yield and government to gain ground." – Thomas Jefferson to Edward Carrington May 27, 1788. Jefferson's admonition has been exactly the course of human events since Adam was appointed governor of Eden. Power is addictive. Political power is dangerously addictive and grows to varying degrees even within the most well-intentioned first time office holders. Jefferson had it right, and those who think the U.S. is somehow immune from that recurring destiny suffers from pure lunacy—especially now that 50% of the voting population saw fit to reelect Obama and give him a friendly Senate.

Now let there be no misunderstanding of my position. I concede governments have done some good as well, and I won't be laying ALL the bad at the feet of politicians ONLY. The people themselves have historically had a hand in their own demise also—the most recent example being that 50% who eagerly voted in favor of government largess in 2012. Some 200 years ago, another sage stated the case very accurately, "... A democracy [in our case a representative republic] will continue to exist up until the time that voters discover they can vote themselves generous gifts from the public treasury. From that moment on, the majority always votes for the candidates who promise the most benefits from the public treasury, with the result that every democracy will finally collapse due to loose fiscal policy, which is always followed by a dictatorship." This statement is attributed to many, but Alexander Tyler, a Scottish born British attorney oft times gets the credit.

It matters not who first penned such words of truth, what ultimately matters is that truth itself lives on and will do so in perpetuity—a truth that is assuredly the manifestation of humans repeatedly misusing and abusing political power—a power that is unarguably the most destructive on Earth.
